Demand for Mine Seizure Mounts

Union Freed Of Contempt Charge, Taft Asks Inquiry

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A Capitol Hill move for Government seizure of the coal mines picked up momentum yesterday, when the District Court acquitted the United Mine Workers of contempt charges arising from the union's failure to halt the strike of 370,000 soft-coal miners on order of the court.

The President, too, talked of possible seizure action. He did not make clear how he intended to seize the mines, but he hinted he could do so without any special act of Congress—through his "inherent" powers.

Acquittal of John L. Lewis' union of criminal and civil contempt was announced by Judge Richmond B. Keech at 1:47 p. m. before a packed court room. Most of the spectators—as Government attorneys—were visibly stunned or surprised by the verdict.

In a four-page memorandum decision issued after his announcement, the jurist stated that the Government had failed to prove—"either beyond a reasonable doubt or by clear and convincing evidence"—that there had been "wilful contempt" of the court's injunction of February 11 ordering the union to end the strike and send the miners back to the soft coal pits.

No Conviction "On Conjecture"

"It may be that the mass strike of union members has been ordered, encouraged, recommended, instructed, induced, or in some wise permitted by means not appearing in the record; but this court may not convict on conjecture . . .," Judge Keech declared.

Attorney General J. Howard McGrath hastily conferred with the Government's attorneys in the three-day trial and announced, several hours after the verdict, that the Government would appeal the civil contempt ruling to the higher courts on an "emergency" basis. He said that the law does not permit the Government to appeal the criminal contempt decision.

Reaction on Capitol Hill was two-fold. Pro-Administration legislators began to press for seizure of the mines by the Government. Anti-Administration members of Congress, led by Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), charged that the Government had deliberately presented a weak case against the United Mine Workers, and demanded a Congressional probe of the matter.

At the Statler Hotel, grim operators and gladdened representatives of the union met again under court injunction, in an effort to find a coal peace formula, but

Sit-in Strikers Pass Sixth Day Without Food

New York, March 2 (AP).—Weak and hungry, 17 sit-in strikers grimly held their ground today for the sixth day without food.

"I don't know how much longer we can last," said Carl Scacco, 32. "Nobody has passed out yet, but we're pretty weak and shaky."

He said all of the 10 women and seven men were determined to "stick it out as long as we're able."

The workers began their strike last Friday night in a demand for severance pay after they were discharged by their employer, Fuld & Co.

The greeting card firm said it was moving out of the city.

Police, carrying out a company request, have prevented food deliveries to the strikers.

Cold 'King Coal'

By Byron H. Rollins—The Associated Press

THIS MARCH'S LION—John L. Lewis, boss of the Nation's striking coal miners, breasts the blustery, snowy weather on arrival yesterday at the railroad station in Silver Spring, Md. Lewis, whose union was found innocent of contempt of court charges, was returning from Illinois to resume bargaining for a contract to reopen coal pits

Miners Hail Court Decision

Pennsylvania in 'Emergency' As Crisis Spreads Across U. S.

Pittsburgh, March 2 (AP).—The coal strike crisis worsened across the Nation today with the State of Pennsylvania proclaiming "a serious public emergency."

But idle miners found some cause for rejoicing.

They hailed the Federal Court decision freeing the United Mine Workers from contempt charges, believing it will speed the end of their "no contract no work" walkout.

Gov. James H. Duff of the Nation's second largest coal-producing State said Pennsylvania "faces a crisis of disastrous proportions due to the prolonged strike."

Duff contended the national administration alone has the power to act in the coal strike. He urged Federal officials to "take effective measures" to get the diggers back at work.

News that a Washington Federal Court judge decided against fining the United Mine Workers for contempt of court in failing to heed a stop-strike order swept the coal fields like wildfire.

The majority opinion can be summed up by the comment of John Ghizzoni, Homer City, Pa., a UMW district official, who said: "The decision ought to ease the minds of the coal operators and make them get down to signing a contract."

From the other side of the fence, a coal operator predicted the Government will seize the mines "only if it appears to be a politically wise move."

That statement came from Ralph E. Jamison, jr., sales manager of the Jamison Coal & Coke Co.

A prominent coal industry spokesman who won't allow use of his name said at Huntington, W. Va., that "the Government hasn't used up nearly all its powers to halt the coal strike."

He contended the Government:

1. Hasn't exerted pressure on local UMW leaders by asking for court injunctions in the various county courts.

2. Didn't use the FBI to gather evidence that miners were not complying with the court's back-to-work order.

3. Did not compel John L. Lewis to fire local officers who didn't obey his go-to-work command.

Coal-Hungry Alexandrians Mine 'Pit' Near Lewis' Home

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

It was cold outside yesterday and more and more places in Greater Washington were getting colder inside as the coal supply dwindled.

A spot check of Washington coal dealers showed several without any coal, others who would sell only to regular customers—and in limited quantities, and a few taking orders against hoped-for shipments next week.

In Alexandria, where the five principal dealers hit bottom in their coal bins Wednesday, one retailer started his own mining operations—right in his own backyard. The Nation's chief miner, John L. Lewis, lives nearby.

George H. Robinson & Sons, Inc., of 128 S. Union st., hired several men to dig into the coal crumbs which have piled up in the yard's 40 years of operations and packed into usable fuel. Almost a carload—50 tons—has been removed thus far and there is plenty to go since the coal is "waist-to-shoulder deep."

Two Alexandria dealers reported arrival of small Virginia mine

Bonus Dies In Maryland Legislature

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Annapolis, Md., March 2. The veterans' bonus died with the 1950 session of the Maryland General Assembly at 5:28 p. m. today.

Under a shower of confetti, the House of Delegates adjourned at that time, the Senate having adjourned sine die at 3:50.

The bonus proposal was for all practical purposes dead when the Senate, returning from a half hour's executive session, voted to adjourn on a voice vote, and killed any chance of passing the House-sponsored bonus proposal, which would have been financed by an increase in the sales tax.

A Last Hope

The only hope House bonus backers had then was to vote in the Senate bonus bill, calling for a 125-million-dollar bonus fund.

The Senate adjournment was the neatest parliamentary maneuver of the session. The majority of assemblymen, fearing that a vote against the bonus was a vote to return to nonlegislative life, simply would not go on record against the bill.

On roll call after roll call in both Houses, the majority went solidly for the bonus, and against preliminary administration maneuvers to kill it.

The Senate's final failure to act on the House bonus bill, gave every House member who voted for it an out with his electorate—after all the House did approve the bill.

And it also gave Senators an out: the final vote was never taken.

But more than either of these benefits, the Senate adjournment took Governor Lane off a potentially hot spot.

Feared Tax Increase

Most assemblymen were agreed that of the two bonus proposals, that advanced by the House had the only possible chance of passage. It would have coupled the sales tax to the bonus referendum.

Anne Arundel County Delegate John F. McNulty, principal sponsor of the House bill, did not give up the fight easily in the House. He was on his feet as soon as the House re-assembled after the Senate adjournment, calling for the floor.

But Speaker C. Ferdinand Sybert outwitted him twice. First came a message from Gov. Lane on the session's end and its accomplishments to take precedence over McNulty's request. Next, Majority Floor Leader Leroy Pumphrey of Prince Georges, got the nod from Sybert and succeeded in getting suspension of the rules to consider four Senate bills.

McNulty apparently gave up on the second of these rules suspensions when, on a slow roll call vote, the motion against the suspension lost by an overwhelming majority. McNulty did not ask for the floor again.

VA to Lay Off 7500 By April 10

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

The Veterans Administration is rushing plans to fire between 7500 and 8000 of its employes by April 10, The Washington Post learned last night.

Several hundred VA employes here and nearby will get the ax in the major shake-up.

VA Administrator Carl Gray disclosed plans for the big reduction in messages sent yesterday to key agency employes here and in the field. He instructed them to give out 30-day discharge notices a week from today to become effective on April 10.

VA's department of medicine and surgery will be hard hit by the pending lay-off, the first it has had to take. It has been ordered to fire 3000 hospital employes, from attendants to doctors, and 1800 employes from the medical sections in the regional offices.

A total of 4800 employes would have to be fired from the medical program. But the program has 117,000 of the 187,000 VA employes, and percentage-wise the claims, insurance, and other administrative sections would suffer.

Administrative Force Hit

Approximately 3000 employes would be laid off from the 70,000-man administrative force.

Among the employes here to be fired will be most of the remaining temporary staff that was recruited to pay the GI insurance dividends as well as cuts "here and there" among the regular employes at headquarters, the regional office, and Mount Alto Hospital. Officials explained it would be another week before the exact number to be cut here would be known.

The reduction was ordered, officials pointed out, for a combination of reasons but it all added up to lack of funds to maintain the present staff.

"We must get in line now," an official explained, "with our 1951 budget. The longer we wait the more people we must fire."

Miscalculation Is Hinted

There was also a hint that VA officials had miscalculated 1950 operating costs a year ago in preparing the budget. It was recalled that Congress, the day before it adjourned last fall, okayed a deficiency appropriation for VA—money which was intended to prevent the firing of about 8000 employes at that time.

Although no definite decision has been made, officials confided that they expect the sharp cutback to result in the closing of from 300 to 400 contact offices throughout the country, and the closing and merger of half a dozen regional offices.

In addition, the eventual closing of some hospital beds is a clear possibility. A VA spokesman explained that additional hospitals were being constructed and several thousand additional beds would become available within the next year.

Storm Warnings Flying

Bitter Cold Strikes Capital; Wind Blows Man Into Street

A record low temperature for the season of between 10 and 15 degrees above zero was predicted for early today by the Weather Bureau. With it will come continued high winds, making it seem even colder, and making coal piles shrink faster. Previous low was 19 on February 20 and 21.

By tonight, however, the turning point in the current cold wave is expected. Then, forecasters said, a gradual warmup is expected to begin, with milder weather due to continue for some days.

High yesterday was the freezing mark—32—at 12:01 a. m. The daytime low was 22 at 7:50 a. m., and at 11 p. m. the mercury tumbled to 18.

The forecast for today was "mostly sunny and cold," with high in the low 30s.

Wind yesterday blew at 24 to 28 miles per hour most of the day, but gusts brought it up to 45 miles per hour at times, once to 50 miles.

Snow fell twice early yesterday.

Northwest storm warning signals were shown along the East Coast, and on Chesapeake and Delaware Bays for winds from 30 to 45 miles per hour.

Shortly before 11 p. m., Inspector Oscar J. Letterman, assistant superintendent of police, ordered that beat patrolmen work staggered shifts of four hours each beginning at midnight, because of the cold weather. They were to spend the other four hours of their tours in station houses, on standby duty.

Lawrence Edwards, 67, 1622 D st. se., was treated at Emergency Hospital for cuts and bruises and released. He told police he was blown down from a streetcar loading platform at Connecticut ave., and L st. nw. by a strong gust of wind. A police inspection of the platform failed to disclose any defects that would contribute to his fall.

Boy Who Shot at His Girl Convicted

Edward F. Schwenk, 21, was convicted yesterday by a District Court jury of illegally carrying a frontier-type pistol and shooting at his former fiancee with it.

The shooting took place December 17 at Riverside Stadium. Schwenk fired one shot in the general direction of the girl, Miss Muriel Rowley, 17, of 510 Jefferson st. nw., but missed.

Assistant United States Attorney John D. Lane told the jury that Schwenk acted through love and jealousy but that this did not excuse his misdeed. The defense said that Schwenk, of 2415 E st. nw., had been drinking and did not remember the episode.

Judge David A. Pine continued the case for a presentence investigation. One juror expressed the hope to the judge that some way could be found to rehabilitate Schwenk.

Barrett Denies Talk To Warring

Police Head Says He Never Discussed Crime Investigation With Gaming Figure

Major Robert J. Barrett early today denied that he ever discussed the House probe of District crime with Emmitt Warring.

Barrett is superintendent of Metropolitan police. Warring is a reputed kingpin of the Washington gambling world.

The report that Barrett had informed Warring of certain information wanted by the House Committee formed the core of charges made last night by Police Capt. Anthony Richitt, after his transfer from command of the Third to command of the Eighth precinct.

Dictated Statement

Barrett's statement on the Richitt charges was dictated by telephone to the Washington Post shortly before 1 a. m. today by Daniel B. Maher.

Maher is a special assistant Corporation Counsel who has functioned as liaison man between the District Government and the House Crime inquiry committee, and also as counsel for the police department in the Investigating Committee's hearings.

Barrett said he had had two conversations with Warring in recent months—both on the telephone and both in connection with the holdup of Warring—in which some $20,000 was taken in an armed robbery at Warring's house.

As for Richitt, Major Barrett charged that the captain appeared "indifferent" to the fact there had been no arrests for major gambling violations in the Third Precinct during the 1949 fiscal year.

Barrett said he never did get the report he ordered from Richitt February 1 to explain the absence of gambling arrests in the last fiscal year.

"That," said Major Barrett, "is one of the reasons that I transferred him."

Text of Statement

The text of Major Barrett's statement released by Maher follows:

On February 1, 1950, I was advised by Daniel B. Maher, special assistant corporation counsel and liaison man between the Board of Commissioners and the subcommittee of the House investigating crime and law enforcement in the District of Columbia, that police exhibit No. 1 which was then before the committee disclosed that no arrests had been made for gambling law violations in Precincts No. 3 and 7 during the fiscal year 1949 and that Hyman Fischbach, general counsel of the committee, had asked for an explanation.

I immediately called Capt. Anthony Richitt of the Third Precinct and Capt. Beverly Beach of the Seventh Precinct and directed them to make a report to me so that I could satisfactorily answer Mr. Fischbach's request. On February 2 I received Captain Beach's report. On February 2 at 4 p. m. I summoned both Captain Beach and Richitt to my office.

I told them that the apparent lack of enforcement of gambling

Sesqui Plans Non-Profit Group To Run Freedom Fair in 1951

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Sesquicentennial Commission plans to set up a new non-profit corporation to take over the entire job of running the Freedom Fair.

The commission has also revived a hunt for a site larger than the one already approved at the foot of East Capitol st. beside the Anacostia. Two suggestions under consideration are the District's Blue Plains Home for the Aged near the southern end of South Capitol st. and the Justice Department's National Training School for Boys at the northeast boundary line beside the Anacostia, off Bladensburg rd.

At a secret executve committee meeting Tuesday, it was decided to approve the appointment of Paul M. Massmann, veteran impresario, as the Freedom Fair boss. As soon as he is approved by the full commission, Massmann is expected to settle the site matter.

The non-profit corporation, which Massmann would head, has the approval of the Sesqui's own lawyers but they have recommended getting an okay as well

Fay Urges Jail Terms to Halt D. C. Gaming

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

United States Attorney George Morris Fay declared yesterday that fines for Washington gamblers are just a cheap form of license for them to practice here.

He said the only way to control gambling is to impose jail terms on persons convicted for gambling violations and to make them serve the sentences.

He questioned sharply, however, whether the use of "John Doe" warrants would be upheld by the courts, if Congress authorized them. He said they might be abused.

Fay, as chief Federal prosecutor in Washington, urged a general strengthening of District laws, in an afternoon of testimony to the Special House District Committee investigating crime and law enforcement here.

Fay said the crime of abortion

Captain Says Data He Gave Probers Led To Transfer

Police Official Moved From No. 3 Asserts He Wants Facts Out in the Open

By Benjamin Bradlee and Alfred E. Lewis
Post Reporters

Capt. Anthony Richitt last night charged that Police Chief Robert J. Barrett transferred him because of information he gave to the House District subcommittee investigating Washington crime.

Richitt, formerly captain of Precinct No. 3, was shifted to Precinct 8 Thursday night. Commissioner John Russell Young said the transfer was made because of "failure to carry out his assigned duties and disrespect toward his superior officers."

Richitt told reporters he was moved because he described to a House sub-committee investigator a conference where Emmitt Warring, reputed Washington gambler, was said to have disclosed confidential committee information which he said was given him by Major Barrett.

Referred to 'The Boss'

Richitt's report of his meeting with Warring alleged that the gambler referred to the Chief of Police as "The Boss."

The details of this meeting with Warring, which occurred at the Third precinct station, Richitt said, were laid before Subcommittee Chairman James Davis (D., Ga.), and the subcommittee staff.

The purpose of Warring's visit, according to Richitt's account, was to acquaint the Third Precinct captain with the crime committee's interest in the lack of gambling arrests in the Third Precinct.

At its conclusion, the gambler assured Richitt that he would "take care" of him, Richitt asserted.

Chairman Davis said last night the issues raised by Richitt would be placed before the special District crime inquiry committee in an executive meeting first thing today.

Davis, chairman of the committee, said he plans to call the committee together with the idea of "taking some immediate action."

Indications were the immediate action would take the form of full hearings in which all individuals concerned would be called to testify. Davis would not comment on details of Richitt's statement.

Ritchitt held a special press conference at his home, 512 Somerset pl., last night, after he said he was told by District authorities to take his transfer like a man and "you'll make out all right."

Richitt said he told his story publicly because "I have seen them bury men like me before. They are playing dirty and I want to get this out in the open."

"This Is What I Think"

Richitt opened his press conference with:

"You men have been after me about the real reason for my transfer. This is what I think the real reason is:

"On January 31, I got a message to call Major Barrett. I called on him and in substance this is what he said:

"He said that Danny Maher was talking to Fischbach last night and that Fischbach was concerned about the lack of raids, lack of gambling cases in Number Three precinct," Richitt said.

Gross Income Of Miss Truman Put at $60,000

Edinburg, Tex., March 2, (U.P.). Margaret Truman said today that she doesn't know how much money she is receiving as a concert singer. She added that she isn't worrying about the approaching March 15 income tax deadline.

Miss Truman, in Edinburg for a concert today, said Kenneth L. Allen, jr., vice president of the firm handling her tour, "takes care of that."

"I honestly don't know what the total will be," she said.

Allen estimated that Miss Truman grosses about $60,000 a year, almost as much as her father receives as President.

"My income tax is withheld in easy instalments," Miss Truman said.

Senators Back Byrd, Reply to Humphrey

By The Associated Press

Democrats and Republicans yesterday fired back at Senator Humphrey (D., Minn.) for suggesting abolishment of the Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures headed by Senator Byrd (D., Va.).

President Truman declined comment at his news conference on the proposal of Humphrey, who called the committee "the No. 1 example of waste and extravagance in the Government."

Byrd told the Senate that the Minnesotan had cast a "repugnant slur" on the membership of the committee in a February 24 speech. He accused Humphrey of "misstatements" of facts.

The group is made up of members of Senate and House committees dealing with appropriations and taxes, the Secretary of the Treasury and Director of the Budget Bureau.

Senator George (D., Ga.), Senate Finance Committee chairman and a member of the joint group, said he knew of no more valuable committee in Congress.

Irresponsibility, He Says

"It is the height of reckless irresponsibility for anyone to suggest otherwise," he asserted facing in Humphrey's direction.

Humphrey tried unsuccessfully to interrupt Byrd during the latter's speech.

"I knew I could expect the anti-Fair Deal coalition to give me the business," he said when he finally got the floor.

He repeated his charges of "waste and extravagance" and said the Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures already was charged with doing the job Byrd said the joint committee was doing.

The Minnesotan offered to resign from the expenditures group and suggested Byrd, "who knows all about economy," for his place.

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.), chairman of the Appropriations Committee, told the Senate that Byrd "is one of the finest, ablest and most efficient men" he has ever know. He added the "fine" work of the Byrd committee has been useful to his own group.

Others Defending Byrd

Others who defended the Byrd committee were Eastland and Stennis, Mississippi Democrats, Wherry and Butler, Nebraska Republicans; Williams (R., Del.), Cain (R., Wash.), McClellan (D., Ark.), Ferguson (R., Mich.), Mundt (R., S. Dak.) and Tobey (R., N. H.).

Byrd and George digressed from defense of the committee long enough to call out strongly again for a balanced Federal budget.

"If we can't balance the budget now, when in God's name can we balance it?" Byrd asked after calling attention to the high income of the Nation.

George later thundered: "There is no possible excuse for a deficit now running toward six billion dollars."

Senator Lucas of Illinois, the Democratic floor leader, told Byrd he also wanted a balanced budget, but warned he would not go along with any proposal he thought might jeopardize the Nation's defenses or international obligations.

Blames Spending Rise

"Talk about normal times," Lucas said, "these are the most extraordinary times in the peacetime history of America."

When Lucas suggested—as has President Truman—that the five-billion-dollar tax cut approved by the GOP-controlled Eightieth Congress was in part responsible for the present deficit, Byrd disagreed.

Even before that tax cut, Byrd said, the President recommended repeal of the excess profits tax, which cost the treasury six billion dollars. But neither, he contended, was responsible for the Nation operating in the red.

"What is responsible," he asserted, "is that expenditures have increased nine billion dollars in the last two years."

Byrd called on Lucas to get behind the budget-balancing drive and said that with such aid the Government books could be balanced.

"I have great confidence in the Majority Leader when he is on the right track," the Virginian declared.

Byrd's prepared speech called for expunging from the record part of Humphrey's February 24 remarks. But he omitted this in delivering it on the floor.

'Hidden Motive'

Disabled Aid In Security Measure Hit

An insurance economist said yesterday proposed Federal benefits for total disability of workers would "pave the way for compulsory medical care for all."

Edward H. O'Connor of Chicago, managing director, Insurance Economic Society of America, made this comment before a Senate finance subcommittee. This group is considering a House-passed bill to broaden coverage under the Social Security program.

He declared the "hidden motive" of this proposal was the "slow innoculation and softening up of the American people for the imposition of 'Socialized' medicine."

O'Connor told the Senators that insurance companies had had "unfavorable experience" with total disability clauses in policies. He said that as a result of heavy losses during the depression insurance companies withdrew from this field.

"Disability is an intangible, subversive concept," he sadi. "It differs materially from the definite facts of death or old age. The attitude of the individual when suffering a particular condition invariably governed to some extent the degree of disability."

O'Connor said "it is recognized that the payments of disability benefits for any length of time, even in modest amounts, undermines human personalities, destroys incentive and the will to seek work fitted to one's capabilities."

John M. Miller of Springfield, Mass., vice president of the Monarch Life Insurance Co., also objected to the disability payment proposal.

"Cash benefits for extended disability generally have the effect of prolonged disability and deferring the return to productive activity," he said.

Bankers Urge Regulating of Holding Firms

By the United Press

Bankers from many sections of the country yesterday urged strict curbs on bank holding companies to prevent "chain store banking" in the United States.

They testified before the Senate Banking Subcommittee considering legislation to clamp Federal controls on bank holding companies — concerns which control several banks and sometimes other businesses.

E. J. Eaton, vice president of the First National Bank of White River Junction, Vt., said New Englanders are strongly opposed to operations of out-of-state banking firms.

"The people in our area don't want chain store banking," he said.

Orval W. Adams, vice president of the Utah First National Bank of Salt Lake City, said "the device of the bank holding company was evolved in order to evade the banking laws of the Nation."

Den Dubois of Sauk Centre, Minn., representing the Independent Bankers Association, said the holding companies should "be subject to the same regulation as banks."

W. L. Gregory of the Associate Bankers of St. Louis said that without the proposed bill the holding companies "may be the loophole in our system of bank supervision that will once again destroy many American banks . . . during the next depression."

Chairman Charles B. McCabe of the Federal Reserve Board supports the bill. He told the subcommittee Wednesday that President Truman favors its general purpose.

Plan of Goss Emphasizes Row Among Farm Groups

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Albert S. Goss, Master of the National Grange one of the big three farm organizations, yesterday proposed a new farm plan to replace the present program.

His proposal, made at the Minneapolis Farm Forum, emphasized a boiling row that has split the potent farm lobby that put across the present high price support system.

It came on the heels of two important developments:

1. Widespread demand for a restudy of farm legislation that followed the Government's decision to destroy millions of bushels of potatoes in order to keep prices at record levels.

2. Extreme bitterness that marked a split between the American Farm Bureau Federation and groups of farmer cooperatives, such as the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives, the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, etc. This split followed testimony by a AFBF lawyer before the House Ways and Means Committee recommending removal of tax exemptions from undistributed earnings of cooperatives "in the same manner as other corporation earnings."

Wide Variety of Problems

"There are almost as many problems as there are varieties of crops," Goss asserted. "No single remedy will cure them all.

"The plan which will meet the problems of the wheat grower," he went on, "may not work at all on eggs; the plan which will suit eggs won't fit oranges; and the program which would bring help to the orange grower would probably prove entirely unworkable when applied to cotton.

"The Grange believes that we must have a wide range of corrective measures available to apply to different crops under different conditions, in order to meet the many problems where farm production is as diverse as ours."

Until now the Grange has been lined up with the bureau in favor of present farm laws. Also in line were the co-op groups. Now it looks as if the AFBF may stand alone.

Brannan Appears at Hearing

Agriculture Secretary Brannan was to have been on the same platform with Goss. Instead, he appeared before a House Banking Committee yesterday in favor of more funds for price supports. Today he goes to Ottawa, where he hopes to talk Canadian officials into halting imports of Canadian potatoes into this country.

Goss' program includes one other highly controversial suggestion. He would have the President and the two Agriculture Committees of Congress, name a 12-man "Federal Farm Commission" to advise the Secretary of Agriculture on policy and programs.

Sawyer Undergoes Gallstone Operation

Cincinnati, March 2 (AP).—Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Commerce, was operated on at Christ Hospital today for the removal of gallstones.

Dr. Reed Shank, a personal friend of Sawyer, did the operating. He said the appendix also was removed and that Sawyer came through the ordeal in good condition.

Romania Bans U. S. Information Office

Bucharest, Romania, March 2 (U.P.). The Romanian government today asked the United States and Britain to close their information offices in Bucharest.

The official Romanian news agency announced the Foreign Ministry had notified the United States Legation here "of the request of the Romanian government that information offices working with the framework of the legation be closed and cease their activities."

The same request was delivered to the British Legation, the agency said.

(The State Department here had "no comment" yesterday on the Romanian government's request for the United States and Britain to close their information offices in Bucharest.)

(The Romanian request came only a few days after Hungary asked the United States and Britain to reduce the size of their Budapest legation staffs.

(A Hungarian note to the Western powers on February 23 said the legations were "disproportionately large," and accused them of working with saboteurs and spies. It said staff reductions would be a logical consequence of the espionage-sabotage trials of Robert A. Vogeler, an American businessman, and Edgar Sanders of Britain. Vogeler was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment and Sanders to 13.

(In early January, the United States ordered Hungary to shut down its consulates in New York and Cleveland. This was considered a retaliation for the treatment of Vogeler, who was held incommunicado from November 22 until his trial last month.)

Truman Bans Soviet Visit As President

President Truman said yesterday that he would like to go to Moscow—but only as a private sightseer some day.

He was firmer than usual in telling his press conference that he would never go while he was President.

I hope, he said, that I have a chance to go when I get through being President; I would like to see the place.

"Have you any idea when that might be?" a reporter asked him. When the President and the reporters stopped laughing, the answer came: your guess is as good as mine.

The ever-recurring question about a visit to Moscow was prompted this time by Senator Brien MacMahon's speech of Tuesday calling for a new aproach to Russia, perhaps through a United Nations meeting in the Soviet capital.

The President repeated what he had often said before—that the door was open here for anybody who wanted to come here. And he said he would cooperate wholeheartedly with anything that would contribute to peace in the world.

By inference the President disagreed with McMahon's emphasis on the horrors of an atomic-hydrogen bomb attack on American cities. He was asked to comment on proposals to move the capital inland as a safeguard against atomic attack.

I am very well satisfied where I am and I [illegible] perfectly safe, he answered [illegible] smile.

One repo[illegible] got nowhere at all when he asked how the President interpreted the British election. Mr. Truman grinned and said he didn't interpret it; he let other people do that for him.

President May Move Press Conferences

Press conferences in the President's office may soon be a thing of the past.

President Truman told reporters yesterday that he was trying to find a more convenient place where acoustics were good, and where everyone could hear the questions and recognize the questioners.

At present, he said, the situation is not satisfactory to those in the rear ranks at crowded White House conferences. He asked the White House Correspondents Association to appoint a committee to discuss the problem with his press secretary, Charles Ross.

Trial of Airman In Girl's Slaying Opens in Paris

Paris, March 2 (U.P.)—An American soldier went on trial today for the murder of a Hungarian woman, and his attorney described him as a "zombie" who suffered from halucinations.

Pfc. Stanley F. Edelbaum, 20, Brooklyn, faced a U. S. Air Force court martial of 10 men, charged with strangling Elisabeth Borik, a 20-year-old Montmartre streetwalker, last May.

Edelbaum sat bored and inattentive as prosecution witnesses described finding the woman's body on a hotel room bed. The witnesses included three Paris police officials and the owner of the Hotel America.

Edelbaum's defender, Capt. Everett H. Smith, of Austin, Tex., said he would claim insanity. Doctors at an earlier hearing in Washington, D. C., adjudged the youth a "schizoid personality," but legally sane.

Reds Reported Honeycombing West Germany

Frankfurt, Germany, March 2 (U.P.).—Lieut. Gen. Clarence R. Huebner, commander of United States troops in Europe, said today that Western Germany is "honeycombed" with Communist agents.

He made the statement to the United Press as the United States Provost Marshal warned American personnel to "take extra precautions" with important papers and documents.

It was disclosed earlier that vital papers had been stolen from the homes of high United States Army officers in recent weeks. Authorities said the thefts appeared to follow a definite pattern, hinting that an organized ring may have been responsible. The thieves, they said, concentrated mainly on the homes of field grade officers—those with the rank of major and above.

Commenting on the recent document thefts, authorities said passports and birth certificates are the "favored items."

Allies Warn Reds Against Berlin March

Berlin, March 2 (NYHT).—The American, British and French commandants issued a joint statement today serving public notice on Communists that their projected March on Berlin will be vigorously suppressed and they will be held responsible for the consequences.

The statement was the first joint warning by Western military commanders in connection with the announcement by Communist-led East German youth that 500,000 of them will march on Berlin during the Whitsunday holiday at the end of May. The Communists have been openly threatening to seize West Berlin from Western hands on this occasion.

Czech Suicide Marks Purge

Prague, March 2 (AP).—The suicide of a top Communist suspect and the reported confession of a Communist former editor to charges of spying for the West dramatized a Czechoslovakian purge of "Titoists" today.

Western diplomatic sources speculated that the case of the former editor, Vilem Novy, might be linked to the disappearance last spring of Noel Field, a prewar employe of the United States State Department.

Disclosures in the Titoist purge came with publication in the controlled press of a report presented to last week's meeting of the Communist Party Central Committee. The report contained a government admission that the ruling Communist Party here is rife with "Titoist Agents," meaning persons who lean to the nationalistic views of Yugoslav Premier Marshal Tito.

The report said Milan Reiman, formerly chancellor of Premier Antonin Zapotocky's office, had committed suicide in his cell while under investigation.

It also declared that Novy, former editor-in-chief of the party paper Rude Pravo, had confessed to betraying state secrets. It said Novy "worked as an agent of the Western imperialists." A trial for Novy—who was expelled from the party last week—and others is expected soon.

Attlee Faces 2-Way Revolt By Labor

London, March 2 (U.P.).—The Labor government was threatened with a crisis in its own party today when the cabinet abandoned plans for further nationalization of industry and labor unions opened a drive for higher pay.

Prime Minister Attlee, risking a revolt by labor leftists, told the cabinet the nationalization program must be stopped in view of the tiny majority of seven the Labor party now has in the House of Commons.

At the same time, defying the government's attempt to freeze wages as an inti-inflation measure, the Amalgamated Engineering Union recommended a strike vote among it one million odd members because their demands for higher pay were rejected.

London busmen, numbereing 35,000, also put forward a claim for higher pay. Both seek a boost of one pound ($2.80) a week.

Meanwhile, two small strikes broke out—by 1500 dockers in London and among aircraft workers at Hatfield.

Despite the known opposition of the Labor left wing to an abandonment of nationalization and the danger of a Labor revolt, the cabinet gave Attlee its full support when he said abandonment was necessary.

The decision means that, pending another Parliamentary election, probably late this summer or early this fall, the Labor government will whittle down to the vanishing point its plans for "more socialism."

As of today, well-informed sources said, the Labor government will make no mention of further nationalization in its program of legislation to be announced by King George next Monday in his "speech from the throne" formally opening the new Parliament.

Today's was the first meeting of the new cabinet. The meeting lasted 2 hours and 25 minutes—unusually long.

Tories Hit War Minister As 'Avowed Communist'

London, March 2 (U.P.).—A Leading London newspaper said today a big government investigation into the leaking of atomic secrets to Russia had been entrusted to "an avowed Communist"—War Minister John Strachey.

It was reported in political quarters that Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee sent direct orders to Strachey to take charge of a sweeping investigation into the way atomic spy Dr. Klaus Fuchs, sentenced to prison for 14 years yesterday, was able to keep a key job in A-bomb and H-bomb research even though he was known to be a Communist.

A few hours later the Evening Standard, owned by Conservative Lord Beaverbrook, loosed a merciless blast against Strachey. Beaverbrook is a close friend of Winston Churchill.

Americans Flocking to Rome As Pope, 74, Begins 11th Year

Vatican City, March 2 (AP).—Pope Pius XII, 74 today, began the eleventh year of his reign over the world's 400 million Roman Catholics by calling Rome a spiritual battleground for defense of human dignity against its modern attackers.

As he spoke, thousands of pilgrims made their way to the great basilicas—St. Peter's, St. Mary Major, St. John Lateran and St. Paul's Outside the Walls—seeking spiritual benefits through the faithful observance of Holy Year requirements. Many pilgrims were Americans.

For one group of 600 Americans Francis Cardinal Spellman, Archbishop of New York and close friend of the Pontiff, served as a guide. Not only did he lead prayers, but he pointed out historical sights. Regularly assigned guides stood by and listened.

Other American pilgrims were arriving in a steady stream. Two planes arrived last night and another three were due tonight, bringing 100 pilgrims. Most of these arrivals were from Minnesota.

Cardinal Spellman's group entered each basilica behind a simple wooden cross and an American flag whose staff was inscribed: "Archdiocese of New York Holy Year Flag."

It was believed the first time that a United States flag was carride through the holy doors which are opened only for these jubilee celebrations.

The Pope's remarks were made to some 300 Lenten preachers of Rome, whom he urged to preach in the spirit of the first Pope, St. Peter.

Planned SLAVERY

by VICTOR RIESEL

Our Government has just received detailed information from a former highly placed Russian—who slipped into the American Zone of Berlin recently—which discloses for the first time the exact manner in which the MVD (Soviet secret police) operates more as a slave manpower overseer than as an internal counter-espionage corps.

The information supplied during weeks of conversations between this Russian refugee and U. S. officials in Germany has been made available exclusively to this column and will be used shortly by the Western democracies in a public fight within the United Nations councils.

Without the exploitation of 20,000,000 people in MVD slave labor camps, the economy of the Soviet Union and its vast armament program would collapse according to the Russian, who was a top echelon official of GOSPLAN, the USSR's highest planning agency.

Slave Labor Battalions

In fact, this former GOSPLAN executive, now under secure guard in Western Germany, reveals that the Soviet secret police was the main construction agency of the USSR just before the German invasion, with a great part of its work devoted to building the Russian aviation industry. It still is.

Here, then, is the first accurate picture of the Soviet security police, not as an internal spy force, but as builders of special projects ordered by the Kremlin. These details were assembled and interpreted by the Commission of Inquiry Into Forced Labor, directed by a minister, Albert Herling.

The Secret Police's slave labor battalions build everything from children's nurseries to housing projects, from mining facilities to logging camps, from defense areas to paved roads of national importance, from camp facilities to railroad lines running through vast isolated regions.

Achievements of Forced Labor

Its prisoners mine uranium, gold, coal, chrome and iron ore, cut down huge forests for timber and dig for oil. The MVD even uses its concentration camp corps to make furniture and kitchenware. The refugee GOSPLANer disclosed that a year or so ago this Secret Police division was ordered to turn out: One-eighth of the total production in the timber industry; 10 percent of all furniture and kitchenware production; 25 percent of the total USSR freight towage and over 40 percent of total Soviet chrome production.

This was only a small part of its assignment that year.

The refugee revealed that since 1938 the MVD has provided "slaves" to produce 75 percent of all gold production and had large quotas for machinery, cement and the operation of oil fields in the Komi area near Ukhta.

The point is that the Russians long ago abandoned arrests for suspicious political activity and now simply seize thousands on short notice from their official manpower division just to provide enough forced labor battalions to produce on the Soviet's timetable.

Planned Hunger and Fear

For example when the Secret Police chief Lazrenti Beria, was called in and told that the Germans had captured the Donbas coal fields and new sources were needed, he merely ordered the arrest of thousands of workers on suspicion of enmity to the state and threw them into construction of a railway line across hundreds of miles of tundra to the Pechora River Basin to tap the coal supplies there.

Just as recently as last June, word came that labor battalions were needed in Central Asia. Some 30,000 persons of Greek, Turkish and Jewish origins were given three hours' notice to be ready to leave their homes and shipped en masse to the Orient. So were entire peoples, like the Crimean Tartars and the Chechens in North Caucasus, for special projects.

According to the U. S. Government's Russian informant, the principal force which moves the political prisoners is hunger—not violence, not wages. The amount of work performed by the MVD prisoners in "corrective labor camps" determines how much they will eat. Those who weaken or refuse to work are hustled into solitary confinement, receive just subsistence rations and then are left to die if they rebel for long. When the forces are depleted, a new call goes out, and other groups suddenly find themselves suspicious characters.

Another type of forced labor not yet revealed here is performed by persons too valuable to ship across the tundra. They work under police guard at their normal jobs, but for reduced wages.

The Russian refugee said that fully half the political sentences in the Soviet Union cover this sort of arrest—intended just to freeze specialists into their jobs.

So, for many a Russian the secret MVD is with him literally from the cradle to the grave, for he is born in the Secret Police's hospitals, raised in its nurseries and dies in its labor camps. (from New York Daily Mirror)

Foreign Economics Council Is Proposed

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

A plan to set up a Cabinet-level committee on foreign economic policy was reported yesterday to be in the White House awaiting President Truman's approval.

The President told his press conference yesterday that such a plan might be under consideration, but had not yet been put up to him.

Still, informed officials left no doubt that such a plan existed, that it had strong support from the State Department and encouragement from the Treasury, and that it had been discussed in a number of agencies ever since last November.

If the idea is approved, it should enable Cabinet officers to make Government-wide policy decisions on such major problems as the present British dollar shortage, the future of the under-developed areas, and the economy of western Europe after the end of the Marshall Plan.

Would Be in White House

At present such problems are being tackled by officials of relatively low rank, and largely in the State Department, although other agencies are consulted. The new plan would place the foreign economic council in the White House, with a Presidential assistant as chairman.

Behind the plan is the knowledge that major foreign economic problems now have repercussions almost as wide as the Government itself. The Hoover Commission estimated last year that 46 Government agencies were involved in one way or another in foreign affairs.

Present efforts to ease the British dollar shortage, to take one example, involve the Interior Department on oil, the Maritime Commission on shipping, the Treasury on customs procedures, the Agriculture Department on American import quotas, and the Commerce Department on imports generally.

The Hoover Commission, of which Secretary Acheson was vice-chairman, found that Cabinet-level committees were needed "in crucial areas in the conduct of foreign affairs where the issues transcend the responsibility of any single department and where Presidential consideration is necessary."

There are, however, at least two interdepartmental groups which cover part or all of the field proposed for the new council. One is the Executive Committee on Foreign Economic Policy, created before the war by President Roosevelt, but now a dead letter because department heads have not used it.

Nominally it is headed by Willard Thorp, assistant secretary of state for economic affairs. Not only the State Department, but the Treasury, Interior, Agriculture, and Commerce Departments are supposed to be represented on it. This committee, whose existence has been almost forgotten, has not met for months.

One on Monetary Affairs

The other, a far more powerful and effective mechanism, is the National Advisory Council on International Monetary and financial problems. This cabinet-level group, set up by Congress and headed by Treasury Secretary Snyder, is the top government agency for deciding on loans or grants to foreign countries.

From time to time non-members like the Secretary of Agriculture are invited to its meetings, although the Council usually does not deal with problems such as the impact of foreign imports on the American economy. It may be, therefore, that instead of setting up a new Cabinet council the President may prefer to widen the powers of the National Advisory Council and extend them over the entire field of foreign economic policy.

Reds Lock Yank In Shanghai Plant During Air Raids

Hongkong, March 2 (U.P.).—The American manager of the Shanghai power plant is locked in the plant 24 hours a day by the Communists so he will "suffer the consequences" of Nationalist air raids, Nationalists officials said today.

The officials, on Formosa, said that after the initial raid on the American-owned plant the manager was tied to a chair in a small office. Later, they said, he was untied but was not allowed to leave the premises.

(A New York spokesman for the American and Foreign Power Co., of which the Shanghai company is a subsidiary, confirmed that the manager, A. S. Gehrels, is locked in during raids but said he is allowed to go home at night.)

Stikker Declares Integration Is Only Solution for Europe

Only an inclusive economic integration of Western European nations can assure the Continent's future, a top European Marshall Plan official declared yesterday.

Dr. Dirk U. Stikker the newly appointed "political conciliator" of the European Marshall Plan organization, firmly rejected the idea of smaller, regional groupings, as a prelude to over-all economic unification.

The goal, rather, must be primarily the creation of a single, large European market, with Britain joining and "the full readmittance of Western Germany."

Filling his only public speaking engagement of his trip to this country, Stikker told a large Press Club audience that slow progress toward economic unification in Europe did not mean failure.

The tone of his remarks was one of gentle chiding of Americans in general, and Economic Cooperation Administration officials in particular, for expecting too swift and spectacular results.

Europe is on the road to integration, he insisted. He forecast major success in this campaign within a few weeks, with the conclusion of a Western European payments agreement that would lead to great liberalization of trade.

The trend of economic isolation in Europe, on the rise since the 1930's, is already reversed, Stikker said. The new trend, he added, "is a fact of real historical significance."

Stikker, who is also the Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, touched on, but did not expand, a theme of growing concern in Europe. It is: What is the relationship of the United States to Europe, and what will it be after the Marshall Plan ends in 1952?

Stikker observed, "It has often been said that the relationship between the United States and the countries of Western Europe has reached a unique and decisive stage. But there seems to exist no unanimity on the interpretation or the definition of the uniqueness of the moment."

He warned that after 1952, despite European recovery progress, a world dollar shortage would still exist. Part of the solution, he intimated, would have to come from the United States, in making possible an increase of imports.

This would call for "lower tariffs, liberalized import procedures, and more especially a larger degree of import-mindedness" by America, he said.

All 10 U. S. Airmen Saved in Sea Crash

San Juan, Puerto Rico, March 2 (U.P.).—Ten American naval fliers were rescued from possible death in a stormy Caribbean at dawn today.

The fliers were aboard a PBM patrol bomber forced into the sea when its two engines failed. The plane was on a night sweep in search of a mythical "enemy" in "operation portrex," combined Army, Navy and Air Force war games. The scene was 500 miles north of the Dominican Republic.

When word of the ditching reached headquarters, operation Portrex was turned into a gigantic search operations, but chief credit for the rescue was given to an alert Pan American Airways pilot flying on a regular New York to San Juan flight.

Pilot John Steers spotted flares sent out by the crewmen, relayed the location to the Navy and circled the spot for two hours until rescue ships arrived.

When picked up by two destroyers, the men had tossed in life rafts for about 4 hours, buffeted by high winds and heavy seas.

ADM. MALCOM SCHOEFFEL
Heads naval air test base

The Navy yesterday assigned Rear Adm. Malcolm F. Schoeffel, wartime commander of the aircraft carrier Cabot and an air ordnance expert, to command the Naval Air Test Center, Patuxent, Md.

Admiral Schoeffel, now commander of Carrier Division 6 of the Atlantic Fleet, fills a post that has been vacant since Rear Adm. Apollo Soucek was transferred several months ago. Schoeffel's home is at 2859 29th st. nw.

Other shifts announced yesterday by the Navy:

Rear Adm. Thomas S. Combs, from command of Carrier Division Two in the Atlantic to be chief of staff to the commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Flet.

Rear Adm. Hugh H. Goodwin, now holding the latter post, to be the president of the Naval War College.

Rear Adm. William L. Rees, now with the Joint Chiefs of Staff, to relieve Combs.

Rear Adm. John M. Higgins, chief of staff of the Pacific Fleet training command, to head Cruiser Division Five, a new Pacific command. No relief has been named for Schoeffel.

Coalition to Fight President's Plea For Rent Control

NYHT News Service

Despite a renewed plea yesterday from President Truman for extension of Federal rent controls, a determined Senate coalition was reported prepared to battle continuing restrictions after current legislation expires June 30.

Advocates of continuing controls said the first test of their strength probably will come next week when Senator Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), the Senate majority leader, calls up a deficiency appropriation bill containing drastic cuts in requests of the housing expediter for rent control operating funds. The Senate Appropriations Committee would provide only $2,600,000 to cover terminal leave commitments to employes of the control office.

Truman Upholds Johnson on Defense Cuts

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

President Truman yesterday defended his Administration's military spending cuts, declaring that American defenses are stronger today than ever before in peacetime.

He came to the support of Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson—who has been under attack for re·cing the armed forces' budget—as Johnson submitted his first full-dress report on his economizing.

But at the same time, it was disclosed that Air Force chiefs have warned Congress that its strength will "deteriorate" if its budget ceilings are not raised.

Testimony given by Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington and other USAF officials before the House Appropriations Committee was made public declaring that the present 48 groups cannot be kept modern without additional funds. Their statements were made while being interrogated on the 1951 defense budget.

At the same time, Symington said he supported the President's military budget, because "we believe economic disaster might prove as fatal as military disaster."

In a semi-annual report to Congress, the defense chief said that savings and reductions totaling 1.5 billions will be made during the current fiscal year. And he told a press conference that "overhead" cuts are being "plowed back" into better combat forces.

Mr. Truman was asked about recent charges that Johnson's economy program has weakened the Nation's defense. He replied that he thought there was not a word of truth to them.

The President added that he believed that our defenses are in better shape now than at any time other than wartime.

The published hearings also disclosed that Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, vice chief of USAF staff, testified that Russia "soon" should be able to "launch an atomic attack in significant strength" against the United States.

Symington noted that the Soviets would have to fly one-way missions to reach some parts of the United States, but declared this was not "particularly suicidal" as we do not shoot prisoners.

Johnson sent to Congress one chapter of a forthcoming report—not yet printed—which deals with the reductions. Elaborating on it to the press, he predicted that the 13-billion-dollar spending level for the Department of Defense set for 1950 and 1951, will continue through 1952. Preparation of the '52 budget now is underway.

Meanwhile, officials of the National Security Resources Board told Congress that it may be asked at this session to enact standby legislation giving the President some emergency powers needed in a mobilization.

Cold War May Upset Foreign Aid Budget

By the United Press

The State Department warned Congress yesterday that "unforeseen developments" in the cold war could disrupt its plans to hold foreign aid spending down to $4,500,000,000 in the new 1951 fiscal year.

The statement, in a report to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, apparently did not herald any early Administration request for an increase in the sharply trimmed foreign aid budget.

On the contrary, the department indicated that it expects to take care of southeast Asia—for which a "little Marshall Plan" is now being prepared—out of presently requested funds.

But it said that "in view of the present international situation" there is always the chance that something will happen to "compel" the Administration to ask Congress for additional aid programs.

The report did not mention any particular part of the world in this connection. But diplomatic observers believed the reference was to Communist-threatened countries around China's borders.

The report was requested by Senator Walter F. George (D., Ga.), a member of the Foreign Relations Committee and a leader of the Senate economy bloc, which favors sharp cuts in overseas spending.

He demanded to know whether the Administration is standing firm on President Truman's budget estimates submitted last January. These called for over-all foreign spending of 4½ billion dollars in fiscal 1951—a cut of $1,200,000,000 from the current fiscal year.

George said the committee should get an up-to-date report on over-all spending plans before acting on the pending $2,950,000,000 bill for third year renewal of the Marshall European Recovery Program.

In assuring the committee the budget estimates still appear sound, the State Department said it is currently "studying developments in various parts of the world" which may lead to new United States aid outlays.

But the report said "it is anticipated" that these potential aid programs can be handled within the present budget ceiling.

For the security back of Chrysler's pension offer—

look at Chrysler's 25th Annual Report

The 25th Annual Report of Chrysler Corporation, just released, shows sales of Chrysler products during 1949 of $2,084,602,547—highest in the Company's history.

Earnings were $132,170,096 — made possible by the ability of Chrysler to create and build products that people like and buy.

Chrysler's strong position, as shown by the Annual Report, is the result of skill, experience and sound management, reflected in the public demand for Chrysler products over the years. This is the security back of Chrysler's pension and insurance offer. It is the assurance that under the Chrysler proposal, every eligible employee will receive his pension payment—month after month, year after year—for life!

There is no question about Chrysler's willingness to pay pensions. Its offer was made in good faith, backed by the full credit and resources of the Company. In genuine benefits to employees, this offer is comparable with other pension programs in industry.

Basically, the offer provides that Chrysler employees with 25 years of credited service at age 65 would, when they retire, receive payments, including Social Security, of $100 a month for life.

The offer also includes increased life insurance at lower cost, new free life insurance for employees after retirement, and improved sickness and accident and total disability benefits.

It was during discussion of this offer that Union representatives walked out and called the strike on January 25.

Right along, Chrysler has been willing to discuss eligibility and other points with the Union, so that all provisions of the Chrysler offer will be just and equitable to Chrysler employees.

The vital part of any pension plan is a firm assurance that pensions will be paid—for life. Back of Chrysler's pension offer is Chrysler's record of achievement, financial integrity and a net worth of $471,220,182.

Chrysler Corporation

So far, Chrysler employees on strike have lost in wages $32,096,864.79

If the Union wants pensions, Chrysler's offer is a good way to get them

Coplon Defense Ends Without Witnesses

New York, March 2 (AP).—Judith Coplon declined today to call a single witness in her defense. Testimony in her trial with Valentin A. Gubitchev on spy conspiracy charges ended so abruptly it took the Government by surprise.

The long-drawn-out case now goes to a jury of six men and six women after final pleas by lawyers for both sides next Monday and the charge by Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan, probably on Tuesday.

Miss Coplon made it clear by action that she is confident a higher court will reverse any conviction on charges that could send her to prison for 35 years.

One of her court-assigned lawyers, Samuel Neuburger, said it was on his advice that she rested her case without testifying in her own defense or calling witnesses.

Sees "Many" Court Errors

"In my opinion," Neuburger told reporters, "the court has made so many errors in denying the motions for a mistrial that her interests would best be served by resting."

Miss Coplon, 28, a former Justice Department analyst, was convicted in Washington last summer of stealing defense secrets for the Russians. Sentenced to 40 months to 10 years in prison, she is free in bail pending appeal.

In the present case, she and the stubby 33-year-old Gubitchev, a Russian engineer suspended from his United Nations post, are accused ofconspiring to transmit the stolen documents to the Russians. They contend they met secretly in New York not to spy but to carry on a love affair which blew up when Miss Coplon learned Gubitchev was married.

Neuburger and two other lawyers were directed by Judge Ryan to defend Brooklyn-born Miss Coplon after she dismissed her previous counsel, Archibald Palmer, in mid-trial.

Ryan gave the new lawyers, all of whom had some contact with the case in earlier stages, nine days to prepare their defense. Since then, the lawyers repeatedly have asked for a mistrial, contending the time for preparation was far too short.

Government Rests Case

The Government rested its case shortly before noon today after five weeks of trial. Miss Coplon's lawyers came up with a number of motions for a mistrial or a directed acquittal. Gubitchev's lawyer, Abraham L. Pomerantz, made similar motions. The judge denied all of them.

Pomerantz called only four witnesses and rested Gubitchev's case less than two hours after opening it. Among his witnesses was Raymond P. Whearty, one of the two Government prosecutors. Whearty formerly headed the Justice Department's foreign agents registration section and was Miss Coplon's boss.

Pomerantz tried to draw from him an admission that employes often took work home with them—in other words, that secret FBI data found in Miss Coplon's purse might have been homework rather than material intended for the Russians.

Whearty said he didn't know whether employes carried work home. Pomerantz showed him a Washington Post story quoting him as saying the employes had to do so because of a personnel shortage. Whearty said the story was fairly accurate.

Truman Says He Alone Has Fired Disloyal

By Bert Andrews
NYHT News Service

President Truman contended yesterday that he is the only one in the Government who has taken concrete action to rid Federal agencies of disloyal persons.

His declaration was made at a news conference when he was asked once more if he will turn over loyalty reports on employes to a subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The committee is investigating charges by Senator Joseph R. McCarthy (R., Wis.) that past and present employes of the State Department were part of an "espionage ring."

The President's statement contained remarks that were construed by reporters as indirect criticism of Senator McCarthy and his allegations.

Senator McCarthy promptly retorted that "the American people" would "find it difficult and puzzling to try to square the President's remarks of yesterday with his previous allegations that all the congressional investigations into espionage and Communism were 'red herrings'."

The question by a reporter to the President was:

"There is a story that you will send the loyalty records up to the committee. Can you tell us anything about that?"

Mr. Truman said the question of the loyalty file business would be crossed when it comes up.

He observed that at his press conference a week ago he said he was perfectly willing to cooperate with the committee in furnishing them information.

But just for the reporters' information, he went on, if people were really in earnest, if they had the welfare of the country at heart, and if they really knew somebody in the Government who wasn't loyal or didn't do his job right, then the proper person to take the matter up with was the President of the United States.

Continuing to speak of himself in the third person, he said that the President of the United States was the only one who had taken any concrete action to get rid of disloyal persons.

He said the President had done this by appointing loyalty boards and ordering them to screen employes. He said the prosecution of Communists had been carried on at the direction of the President. He said he did not think anybody except the President and the executive branch had tried to get to the bottom of the problem.

The President next, was asked whether he would follow a suggestion that he appoint a commission to study the status of civil liberties as affected by the loyalty program.

He replied that he thought the loyalty program was worked out with civil liberties in view. If you follow the proceedings, he added, you will find that nobody's civil liberties have been infringed upon and they will not be infringed upon.

He referred to a speech he made before law enforcement officers and said: If you read that speech you will find that the fundamental basis of the loyalty program is the Bill of Rights. The Bill of Rights, I think, is the most important part of the Constitution.

Senator Scott W. Lucas (R., Ill.), majority leader, told reporters later he regarded President Truman's statement as an indication that the President will make personnel loyalty files available to the investigation committee, but on his own terms.

Senator McCarthy's statement said: "The President, in his statement today, disregarded known facts. Almost every one of the more than 30 convictions of Communists in this country, including Alger Hiss, resulted from congressional action.

"It should be remembered that only last week the President stated that his previous secrecy order 'still stands.'—that the committee could not see any loyalty files. From his statement today, it is clear that he is finally becoming reluctantly aware of the fact that the public will have no part of secrecy orders which serve no purpose except to protect Communists in Government. Today we hear that parts of the loyalty files will be made available. If only part of the information is going to be made available, who is to decide which part? Why can't the committee be trusted to see it all if there is nothing to hide?"

House Probe Fails to Back Up Jordan Story on Harry Hopkins

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

An investigator of the House Un-American Activities Committee testified yesterday he was unable to find any evidence substantiating the more lurid of the charges of former Air Force Maj. .George Racey Jordan.

The ingestigator, Donald T. Appell, said an exhaustive search of documents and a series of interviews failed to link the late Harry L. Hopkins with shipments of atomic secrets, materials and other secret documents to Russia, as intimated last December by Jordan.

Furthermore, official records failed to substantiate the picture that Jordan painted of his own continuing and vociferous efforts to stop huge and improper shipments of uninspected cargoes to Russia.

Appell's testimony before the committee did show, however, that the Russians sent voluminous quantities of noninspected cargo in lend-lease planes flying out of the Air Transport Command's Great Falls, Mont., base, where Jordan was stationed.

From evidence of Jordan and others, confirmed by Appell's investigation, this material contained drawings and blueprints, including secret material on American industrial and war installations.

Jordan was present at yesterday's sessions and is scheduled to testify himself before the committee this morning.

Records presented by Appell showed that Jordan twice called attention to irregularities in the shipments—in that they were not inspected and that the diplomatic immunity privilege seemed to be increasingly abused. Once it was in an official memorandum and a second time in an interview with a counter-intelligence corps agent.

In a radio interview with commentator Fulton Lewis last December 2, Jordan said he searched some of the baggage going out in planes lend-leased to Russia and found a letter on White House stationery with Harry Hopkins' name printed in one corner signed "H. H.", and reading "I had a hell of a time getting these away from Groves" (presumably Gen. Leslie Groves, head of the wartime atomic bomb project).

Unauthorized Cargoes

Later, Jordan said he had "repeatedly" called the attention of Air Force and custom officers to the fact that Russian couriers were flying out unauthorized cargoes. Jordan stated he had ripped radar equipment out of four Russian-bound transport planes.

Appell testified that before Jordan was stationed at Great Falls, the Air Force had told Great Falls personnel to remove radar equipment whenever any was found. After Jordan was there, Appell said, on one occasion he telephoned to a Lieutenant Colonel Getzinger, at Wright Field, reporting radar equipment on a plane, and received Getzinger's permission to remove it.

Appell said Getzinger, in charge of air shipments to Russia, was in almost daily contact with Jordan by phone. But Getzinger could remember no occasion when Jordan had complained of irregular and unauthorized shipments, or of improper volume or type of material going out under the immunity of the diplomatic pouches.

As for the alleged Hopkins letter, Appell said he had examined a large quantity of the late White House official's memoranda and letters written during the 1943-44 period to which Jordan referred. None was ever signed "H. H.", Appell said. Furthermore, he reported that the Government Printing Office, which engraves all White House stationery, never printed Hopkins', or anyone else's name on it.

Appell presented abundant evidence, from records, to show Jordan was correct in his charge that the Russians were sending an increasing volume of diplomatic mail out by the Great Falls route in early 1944, and that there was little orno inspection or knowledge of what they shippedin this way.

He also testified that the names of Russian couriers, mentioned in Jordan's diaries, tallied with lists in the Un-American Activities Committee files. Those files showed that the pouches they carried "contained material regarding new and secret developments in war industries in the United States."

Col. Tilley Indicted On Bigamy Charge

Col. Ralph C. Tilley, 54, assigned to the Adjutant General's Office of the Army, is under indictment for bigamy and harboring an alien, the Army Department revealed yesterday.

Charges were brought against Tilley under Articles of War 95 and 96 last May and he was arraigned in June before a court-martial established by the Military District of Washington. The two articles of war cover "conduct unbecoming an officer" and "disorders and neglects to the prejudice of good order and military discipline."

One specification alleges that on October 29, 1947, while adjutant general of the Mediterranean Theater of Operations, he married Jonilde Bruno, an Italian, although he already was married. Another specification charges him with unlawfully bringing her into the country.

The Italian wife is now employed as a housekeeper-companion on the farm of Mrs. Helen Wall near Boyds, Md. With her is her 18-month-old son, Boris, born after her marriage to Tilley in Italy.

Mrs. Elizabeth Louise Tilley, already married to the colonel at the time of his Italian marriage, is an Army Department employe. She lives at Falls Church, Va.

An Army spokesman said Tilley's court-martial had not proceeded beyond the point of arraignment because it had been continued at Tilley's request to obtain certain depositions from Italy.

should be included among those where a murder charge can be made to stick without proving intent if the abortion results in death. Maximum penalty for a fatal abortion now is 20 years in jail, he said.

He said the law covering threats is now useless as a deterrent to crime. The only present penalty is the posting of a $500 peace bond that costs the defendant $25. He said those who threatened others should be placed on probation. Then, if, during his probation, the person charged committed the threatened crime, he would have to serve the rest of the probation term in jail, plus whatever term was given for the act of violence.

Fay said the law covering deadly weapons should be made to cover weapons, including switch-blade knives, not now listed. John H. Fihelly, Fay's principal assistant, said the present list of deadly weapons includes firearms, machine guns, sawed-off shotguns, and others—and "slung shots" but not switch-blade knives. He explained the deadly weapons list applies in cases of carrying concealed weapons. But cases of assault with a dangerous weapon are not confined to those in the District code list, he explained.

Fay also urged that existing loopholes in other District statutes be closed—among them those dealing with larceny after trust, unlawful entry, receiving stolen property, and others. He said he would file a memorandum later, giving the committee his proposals in detail.

Committee Chairman James C. Davis (D., Ga.), said yesterday's hearing was the last for this week. There were other indications there may be no further hearings this month. The committee is seeking $40,000 from the House to continue the probe.

The question of how effective gambling fines may be in curbing that type of crime was raised by Committee Counsel Hyman I. Fischbach.

"Is it any deterrent to a gambler when he is merely fined?" asked Fischbach.

Fay started his reply by saying the sentences were up to the court, and he would not want to say whether any particular sentence was good or bad.

But as a general thing, said Fay, "I think the only way gambling can be controlled is to impose jail sentences and see that they are served."

Fay said that if the big-time numbers operators feel they can assure their writers their fines will be paid and they won't have to go to jail, then it's easy to get writers and assure them of a good living.

But if a numbers writer is once jailed, Fay said, the gambling fraternity is through with him. "They go out and get somebody else, and tell him he'll make a good living until he's caught," Fay said.

He said he believes jail sentences are the only effective deterrent to gambling.

"I think the imposition of a fine is merely a license," Fay added. "And it's a very light license. It's commonly known that if the racket is anywhere large at all, with a vast amount of money at its command, it would take a tremendous fine to put the gamblers in the lower income bracket."

Fay also suggested the possibility of increasing the District's share of District Court expenses. The District now pays 60 percent, the the Federal Government 40 percent. In the postwar years, said Fay, considerably more than 60 percent of the indictments here have been for offenses that would be considered primarily local ones, as distinguished from those that would be considered Federal offenses in any jurisdiction. He said later this may be offset by the big time-consuming civil cases involving the Federal Government in District Court. He said he had no specific new District percentage payment figure to propose.

Fischback asked Fay whether there had been times when District Court judges had some reluctance to hear cases involving sex crimes because the sordid nature of the testimony would reflect on the dignity of the court. Fay said he knows of no refusal to try a case for that reason.

On the question of making fatal abortions a capital crime, Fay said he could find no reason why the crime of abortion was not included by Congress in the list of several others that require life imprisonment or the death penalty when the crime results in death.

Murder Conviction

Fihelly explained later that it is now possible to get a murder conviction without proving intent when death results from the crimes of rape, mahem, robbery, kidnapping, and housebreaking where a deadly weapon is carried.

Representative A. L. Miller (R., Neb.) of the House District Committee, was the first to recommend a revision of the abortion penalty.

He did so early this year, after the abortion death of Mrs. Nina Gogar Campbell, 19, in January, for which Ralph Willard Myers, 44, is awaiting trial.

from both the Attorney General and the Comptroller General. Sesqui officials expect both approvals will be forthcoming shortly.

Reason for the corporation is the legal requirement that no Federal building can be built, or undertaken, until all the necessary money is on hand. The Freedom Fair will pay for its buildings from rentals of commercial exhibitors, but they will pay only half their bill on signing a lease with the other half due when the space is occupied.

Hence it appeared there would not be enough money on hand to get the buildings started even though there were more than enough in the end.

Profits to Treasury

By creating a new corporation, it will be possible to go ahead with construction while exhibitors are being rounded up. Any profit would go to the Federal Treasury, either directly from the corporation or via the Sesqui Commission.

Just where this plan would leave two organizations which so far have been planning the construction of the buildings and the leasing of space was not clear last night. The Byrne Organization has prepared most of the proposed "U. S. A." building plans and the Sesqui Leasing Bureau, under control of Leo A. Bernstein and Joseph L. Danzansky, has a letter of intent to handle the space leasing of a 5 percent commission basis.

Although the Sesqui's executive committee has promised to operate in a goldfish bowl so that the public would know what was going on, it has made no announcements about the proposed corporation or new site hunt.

Sesqui officials are convinced they could sell twice as much space to exhibitors as would be available in the proposed "U. S. A." buildings on the East Capitol st. site, an area of about 115 acres.

The Blue Plains and Training School sites could offer almost twice that area but the former has numerous scattered buildings on it and the latter is rugged terrain. Neither is as conveniently located as the present site.

There has been talk of Soldiers' Home, East Potomac Park and other areas within the District but they have been ruled out because Congressional action would be necessary. The Sesqui had such a close squeak in the House in obtaining its three-million-dollar appropriation, there is no desire to run the chance of having a repeal rider tacked on any new bill.

Contest Undecided

The question of an architectural competition to design new fair buildings in place of those planned in the shape of the letters "U. S. A." is still up in the air, pending final settlement of the site matter.

The fair is now due to open April 15, 1951, and run for two seasons.

Meanwhile, Sesqui officials yesterday did announce that Col. J. Monroe Johnson, head of the Interstate Commerce Commission, will head the national transportation commission.

Assistants will be William T. Faricy, president of the Association of American Railroads; Vice Admiral Emory S. Land, head of the Air Transport Association, and Arthur M. Hill, of the Greyhound Bus Corp.

'Finger Man' Charge Made in Holdup

A new figure in the $6900 holdup last Saturday night of Mrs. Blanche Boldware was arrested yesterday and charged with robbery.

Police said he was the "finger man" who set up arrangements for the holdup, but did not directly participate in it.

The man was identified as Burnie H. King, 25, of 2213 9th st. nw. He gave his occupation as real estate man.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence, he waived preliminary hearing and was held for grand jury action under $5000 bond, which he furnished. King denied all connection with the robbery.

Two other men were arrested last Sunday and charged with actual participation in the holdup, and police are seeking a third man alleged to have been with them.

Police recovered $6900 worth of jewelry taken from Mrs. Boldware in her home at 125 R st. ne.

Mrs. Boldware is the widow of William Howard Taft (Sunshine) Boldware, a former numbers operator.

now-actually guarantees world's cleanest wash-with no rinsing!

Cuts my washing time and work in half!
"No-Rinse Surf is a huge time-saver! Colors come out clear and bright—my towels are softer, too!"
—Mrs. Ruth Lee
Chicago, Ill.

Yes, it's true! It's a miracle! Amazing No-Rinse Surf guarantees to get your clothes cleaner than any soap, any suds—without any rinsing at all!

Yes, after five years of research, Lever Laboratories discovered a miracle ingredient that floats dirt away. Just take your wash right from the tub and run it through the wringer or spin-drier. The dirt wrings out with the Surf-suds.

Clothes come white — bright — wonder-clean! You need no bluing, no bleach!

Safe? No-Rinse Surf has been approved by the United States Testing Company. Results prove it actually helps clothes wear longer. What's more, your wash dries soft and sweet—irons like a dream. Clothes won't turn yellow or gray. Try No-Rinse Surf and save half the time and work of washday!

See for yourself with No-Rinse Surf!
1 Cuts washing time and work in half!
2 Clothes come whiter—colors brighter!
3 Actually helps clothes wear longer!
4 Wash dries sweet and soft!
5 Clothes iron like a dream!

OR TRIPLE YOUR MONEY BACK! If you are not completely satisfied, return unused portion in package to Lever Brothers Co., 80 Varick Street, New York 13, N. Y., and triple the purchase price, plus postage, will be refunded.

Only washday product approved by U.S. Testing Co. for no rinsing!

24 Killed in Fires As Cold Hits East

Chicago, March 2 (U.P.).—Strong March winds drove a Canadian-born cold wave over most of the eastern half of the Nation today, threatening Southern crops. At least 24 persons died in fires in the United States and Canada.

United States forecasters said the cold extended from the Mississippi Valley east to the Atlantic and deep into the South.

Defective stoves were blamed for the fire deaths. At Monson, Me., Elwood Smith, his mother and six children perished in a home fire started by an oil-stove explosion.

At Kenosha, Wisc., Carroll Maxwell, his wife and three children died when their trailer camp home burned. Neighbors said they had been having trouble with an oil burner.

In Montreal, six persons were killed and 35 injured, six seriously, after an explosion set a Chinatown restaurant and rooming house afire.

Fire Chief R. E. Pare said five bodies were found in the six-story building. Another victim, Ling Su, 66, died shortly after jumping from a third-story window.

[In Noblesville, Ind., the Associated Press reported, a 36-year-old mother and 4 of her 10 children were killed in a fire that levelled their three-room home.]

'Justifiable'

2 Policemen Freed; Slew Fleeing Man

White Dawson

Two police privates were exonerated yesterday at a coroner's inquest in the fatal shooting of a fleeing burglary suspect.

The jury, deliberating only 20 minutes, found that Pvts. Webster D. Dawson and Edward J. White, both of the Tenth Precinct, had "acted in the performance of their duty as policemen," and that the death of Juan Fino, 39, a mechanic, of 6200 Landover st., Landover, was justifiable homicide.

Fino was surprised in the Eastern Star Restaurant, 4840 Georgia ave. nw., about 2:30 a. m. Wednesday by two Sixth Precinct policemen, who said he was raiding the icebox.

He broke away from them and fled in a car. Dawson and White both testified that they were in a scout car, picked up Fino's trail and chased him to Kansas ave. and Nicholson st. nw. There he crashed into a barricade and then started to run, they said.

Both policemen fired at him. One of the bullets struck him in the back of the head. He died at Garfield Hospital 16 hours later.

Police said Fino had a long police record.

Store Owner Fired On; 2 Bandits Take $200

Prince Georges police yesterday sought two bandits, one with an itchy trigger finger, who took $200 from a liquor store on 1701 Kenilworth ave., Kenilworth, Tuesday night.

Isaac Eisenberger, 52, reported that two strangers, one with a tiny gun, ordered him to hand over his money. Eisenberger thought they were kidding, and started to the store rear for aid, he said. A .25 caliber bullet pinging by his ear changed his mind. The bandits escaped in a black car, he said.

2 Southerners Sign Rule Bill Petition

Two Florida House members are among the latest signers of the home rule discharge petition. With 166 members signed, 52 more are needed to bring the bill to the House floor for a vote.

The Southerners were Representatives Bennett and Herlong, both Democrats. Herlong said he was signing to permit a House vote but with no commitment as to how he would vote. Another new signer was Representative Velde (R., Ill.).

Patient Was Dead, Sander to Testify

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
ELISE BORROTO
First defense witness

Manchester, N. H., March 2 (U.P.) Dr. Hermann N. Sander will testify at his mercy murder trial that Mrs. Abbie C. Borroto was dead of cancer before he shot air into her veins, the defense disclosed today.

Attorney Ralph E. Langdell announced as the defense opened its case that the doctor will testify that he made the injections on an "impulse of a moment" and "was thinking of making sure that the pain would not return."

The surprise announcement came after the prosecution had rested its case and a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal was denied. Langdell said Dr. Sander would tell the entire story and tell it accurately.

"He did not tell anyone he killed Mrs. Borroto," Langdell said. "The statements he made have been twisted beyond recognition."

The first defense witness, pretty, dark-haired daughter of the victim, 19-year-old Elise Borroto, testified Dr. Sander tried everything possible to relieve her mother's pain, and "felt almost as bad as I did" when he told her December 4 her mother could not live through the night. After Mrs. Borroto died, Elise said, Dr. Sander invited her and her father "to stay at his house. He didn't mean for the night, he meant for a week or so—he was so concerned about us."

[A nationally known Baltimore doctor denied yesterday that air injections in veins are fatal, and offered to prove it with his own body.

Dr. Harry M. Robinson, professor of dermatology at the University of Maryland School of Medicine, said he is willing to receive an injection of 40 cubic centimeters of air—the same amount used on Mrs. Borroto. He specified it must be done in Baltimore because he cannot leave the city.

He said he has given air injections of 40 or more cubic centimeters to patients, with their permission, without ill effects. His son, Dr. Harry M. Robinson, jr., said he is willing to inject the air into his father's veins.]

Banker Defies Guns, Routs 5 With Tear Gas

Maybrook, N. Y., March 2 (U.P.)—Mild-mannered, small town bank cashier Charles Crist turned the tables on four gunmen today, forcing the masked quartet to crawl, weeping and empty-handed, from his bank.

The bandits entered theMaybrook National Bank with revolvers drawn.

"This is a stickup. Put up your hands," one ordered.

"Go to hell," Crist replied. He stepped calmly over to the wall and pressed a button, flooding the bank with tear gas.

The bandits—blinded and gasping—crawled out the door. They fled in a black sedan. Three hours later police seized five suspects.

The bank had about $30,000 in cash on hand.

AEC Denies Local Couple's Patent Claim

In the first case of its kind, the Patent Compensation Board of the Atomic Energy Commission denied a claim yesterday by two Washington residents for relief for alleged patent infringement.

The two are William A. Fletcher, 1851 Columbia rd. nw., described as an engineer and scientist, and his wife, Nellie Pauline Fletcher, co-owner of two patents and of an interest in a patent application.

The couple alleged the AEC had infringed a patent on certain "communicating circuits," another on an involved apparatus, one phase of which is called a "combined light and flower holder;" and on an application for another patent which the Patent Office listed as having to do with atomic energy.

The Patent Compensation Board determined that there had been no infringement, and hence did not deal with the claim of the Fletchers for "a multiple of millions" of dollars.

Herbert J. Jacobi, attorney for the Fletchers, said yesterday that the decision of the board will be appealed to the Circuit Court of Appeals here.

Findings on 'Big Mo' Due About March 16

Norfolk, Va., March 2 (AP).—Findings of the naval court of inquiry seeking to fix responsibility for the grounding of the battleship Missouri will not be made public before March 16, the Navy said today.

The Big Mo's skipper and one of four defendants before the court, Capt. William D. Brown, has been granted two weeks' leave starting today.

Rear Admiral Allan E. Smith, who will receive the court's findings, said they will not be released until Brown's return.

Deficit $2.78 Billions For Past 8 Months

The Government passed the two thirds mark of fiscal 1950 with a deficit of $2,780,455,000 in operations since last July 1.

President Truman has forecast that the deficit, reflecting the excess of spending over revenue, will rise to $5,533,000,000 by June 30.

For the first eight months of this year, revenue receipts totaled $24,012,435,000, in round figures, against $24,759,071,000 at the corresponding point last year. Expenditures for the eight months of this fiscal year topped last year by $26,792,890,000 to $25,494,454,000.

The Federal debt stood at $256,395,406,000 against $252,747,393,000 a year ago.

Ambassador to Open Israeli Stamp Exhibit

The Israeli exhibit will be opened officially at 3 p. m. today at the Jewish Community Center by Ambassador Elihu Elath and other officials of the Embassy of Israel.

The exhibit will be open to the public without charge through next Tuesday. Hours are 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. daily except Saturday, when they will be from 6 p. m. to 10 p. m. After the initial showing in Washington, the exhibit will tour the country.

Capt. Miller Retires After Two Delays

It took three tries, but Arlington Police Capt. Ernest H. Miller will finally get a chance at some deep sea fishing in Florida.

Capt. Miller

The 65-year-old captain was originally scheduled to retire in January, 1949. But Police Chief Harry L. Woodyard, who called the captain "one of the most valuable employes" in the department, decided to keep him on another year, with Miller's consent.

This past January 1, friends flocked around again to bid the retiring captain farewell.

January 2, he was back at work as head of the traffic department. The chief had talked him into another extension of duty.

Day before yesterday, the veteran of 19 years in the department officially retired. His goodbys took place amid a shower of gifts, including a watch, luggage and two auto tires from the force, and a miniature badge from the County Police Beneficiary Association.

Miller lives with his wife at Bailey's Crossroads, Fairfax. Sergt. Raymond S. Cole has been appointed acting captain in his place.

Downey to Stay In Senate Race, Statement Says

Senator Downey (D., Calif.) announced yesterday he is a candidate for re-election for a third term.

"I make this decision with enthusiasm to meet all who may challenge my record and with the honest conviction that I shall win the race," Downey said in a statement.

Downey said Wednesday he had expected to withdraw from the race but that he was holding up announcement of his decision for a week at the request of Democratic leaders and his supporters generally.

Downey's statement yesterday said that "It is necessary that we preserve the philosophy of a firm and sensible liberal government against the threats of the extremists on both the left and the right. This must be done if we are to carry out the Truman fair deal program, which I support."

Candidates opposing Downey include Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas (D., Calif.) and Representative Nixon (R., Calif.).

Drive to Find Reds In Schools Opposed

Atlantic City, N. J., March 2 (AP). A New York educator said today the number of Communists teaching in public schools "is not so great as to risk a campaign that might or might not discover them."

Frederick C. McLaughlin, educational director of the Public Education Association, said in a prepared address that investigations to locate Communist teachers "might very well discourage able young people from entering the teaching profession."

McLaughlin was a speaker for a discussion group on communism on the closing day of the annual convention of the American Association of School Administrators.

"Loyalty is not imposed by loyalty oaths," he said. "Morale is not built up through witch hunts . . .

"Educator and citizens can validly argue that membership in the Communist Party is prima facie evidence of unfitness to teach, without indulging in witch hunts that will destroy the integrity of the school system instead of contributing to it."

William G. Carr, of Washington, D. C., secretary of the Educational Policies Commission, said in another talk that schools "must develop a desire for peace."

Carr said that although the world has become technically a single unit, it is divided by powerful ideological forces. He added:

"Everybody wants peace; yet no one has been able to bring to bear the necessary moral leadership to secure it.

"Hope for a glorious future and fear of the actual extinction of civilization struggle for control in the minds of men.

"In such an era, the work of the schools in the development of understanding, morale, courage and a cool head is of critical importance."

Ray L. Hamon, chief of the school housing section of the U. S. Office of Education said the Nation must spend $13,500,000,000 in the next 10 years to construct new elementary and high schools.

Hamon said 550,000 new elementary and high school classrooms are required to meet the peak load of enrollment expected in 1958.

Boy, 9, Found Wandering In Arlington

The Washington Post
JOHNNY GREEN
Phones for grandmother

It was farther to Grandma's than 9-year-old Johnny Green remembered.

Johnny, who lives at 3511 13th st. nw., decided about 5 p. m. Wednesday to pay a visit to his grandmother, Mrs. John B. Green, of 5510 N. 25th pl., Arlington.

But he never got there. A police lookout was broadcast. And at 9 a. m. yesterday, Arlington police picked up the footsore Johnny trudging down Lee hwy. near Irving st.

The way Johnny told it, he decided to play with his hamster Wednesday instead of going to the Raymond School, on account of a cut in his foot.

"But I was running around playing tag and all of a sudden it felt all right," he went on. He and a friend then stopped at the Zoo to "play guns," said Johnny, and it was there he decided on a trip to Grandma's, with whom he used to live.

Johnny said he started out along the Rock Creek Bridle path toward Key Bridge, but: "It got dark, and there ain't no use walking in the dark."

So he put up for the night, minus supper, in the furnace room of "a big old apartment house" in Washington. He set out again about 6 a. m. yesterday.

Police Officers Joseph Crissman and Richard Frederick said he confessed being lost when they picked him up.

Johnny's mother, Mrs. Leonard Becraft, said yesterday it isn't her son's first hike to Arlington. "But he went straight to mother's the other times. It took him about 4 hours to walk over."

He sent word about 5:30 p. m. Wednesday by his companion at the Zoo that he was going to visit grandma, she said, but "I kept calling my mother and he hadn't got there."

"I don't like Washington," Johnny explained.

Test of Segregation Law Begins in District

John R. Thompson Co., operator of Thompson's restaurants here, pleaded innocent yesterday in Municipal Court to violating the anti-segregation laws of 1872-1873.

Judge Frank H. Myers continued the case until March 31 to allow the restaurant management time to prepare the case. The prosecution will test the efficacy of the "lost" anti-segregation laws recently held valid for restaurants by the Corporation Counsel's office.

In drawing up the charges, Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark King said he was taking care to see that the test case will be decided on the substantive law rather than on technicalities.

He charged the restaurant at 725 14th st. nw with four violations. Conviction on any one count could also result in a $100 fine and forfeiture of the restaurant license, he said. No new license could be issued to the concern for a year, King said.

Before filing the charges, King said that he received the agreement of counsel for the complainants that the charges represented a proper case against the restaurant.

Knowland Proposes Pacific Area Alliance

By The Associated Press

Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) yesterday proposed that the United States enter into a defense pact with key nations in the Pacific area, including Australia, New Zealand and Japan.

He said that unless this country is prepared to "help stabilize the military situation" in the Far East, it might as well forgo any further economic aid to that area.

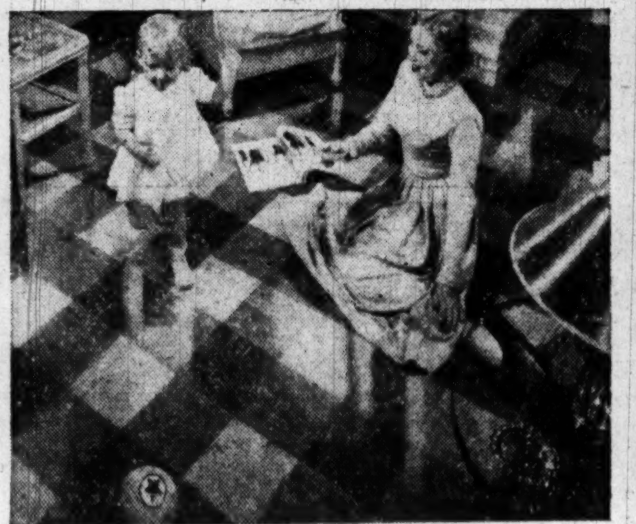
GOLD SEAL: the Self-Polishing Floor Wax Proved Better All 4 Ways

1 SHINING LUSTRE! Here's the most wonderful wax ever to brighten a floor. Prove it—without work. Spread on Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax—(new from the makers of "GLASS WAX"). See it dry without buffing to a more brilliant, lasting shine!



2 ANTI-SLIP protection for you and your family! Here's the floor wax tested for anti-slip quality by Underwriters' Laboratories, with the "UL" emblem on every can. Though not slippery like some waxes, Gold Seal isn't sticky. Yet it has such lovely shine!

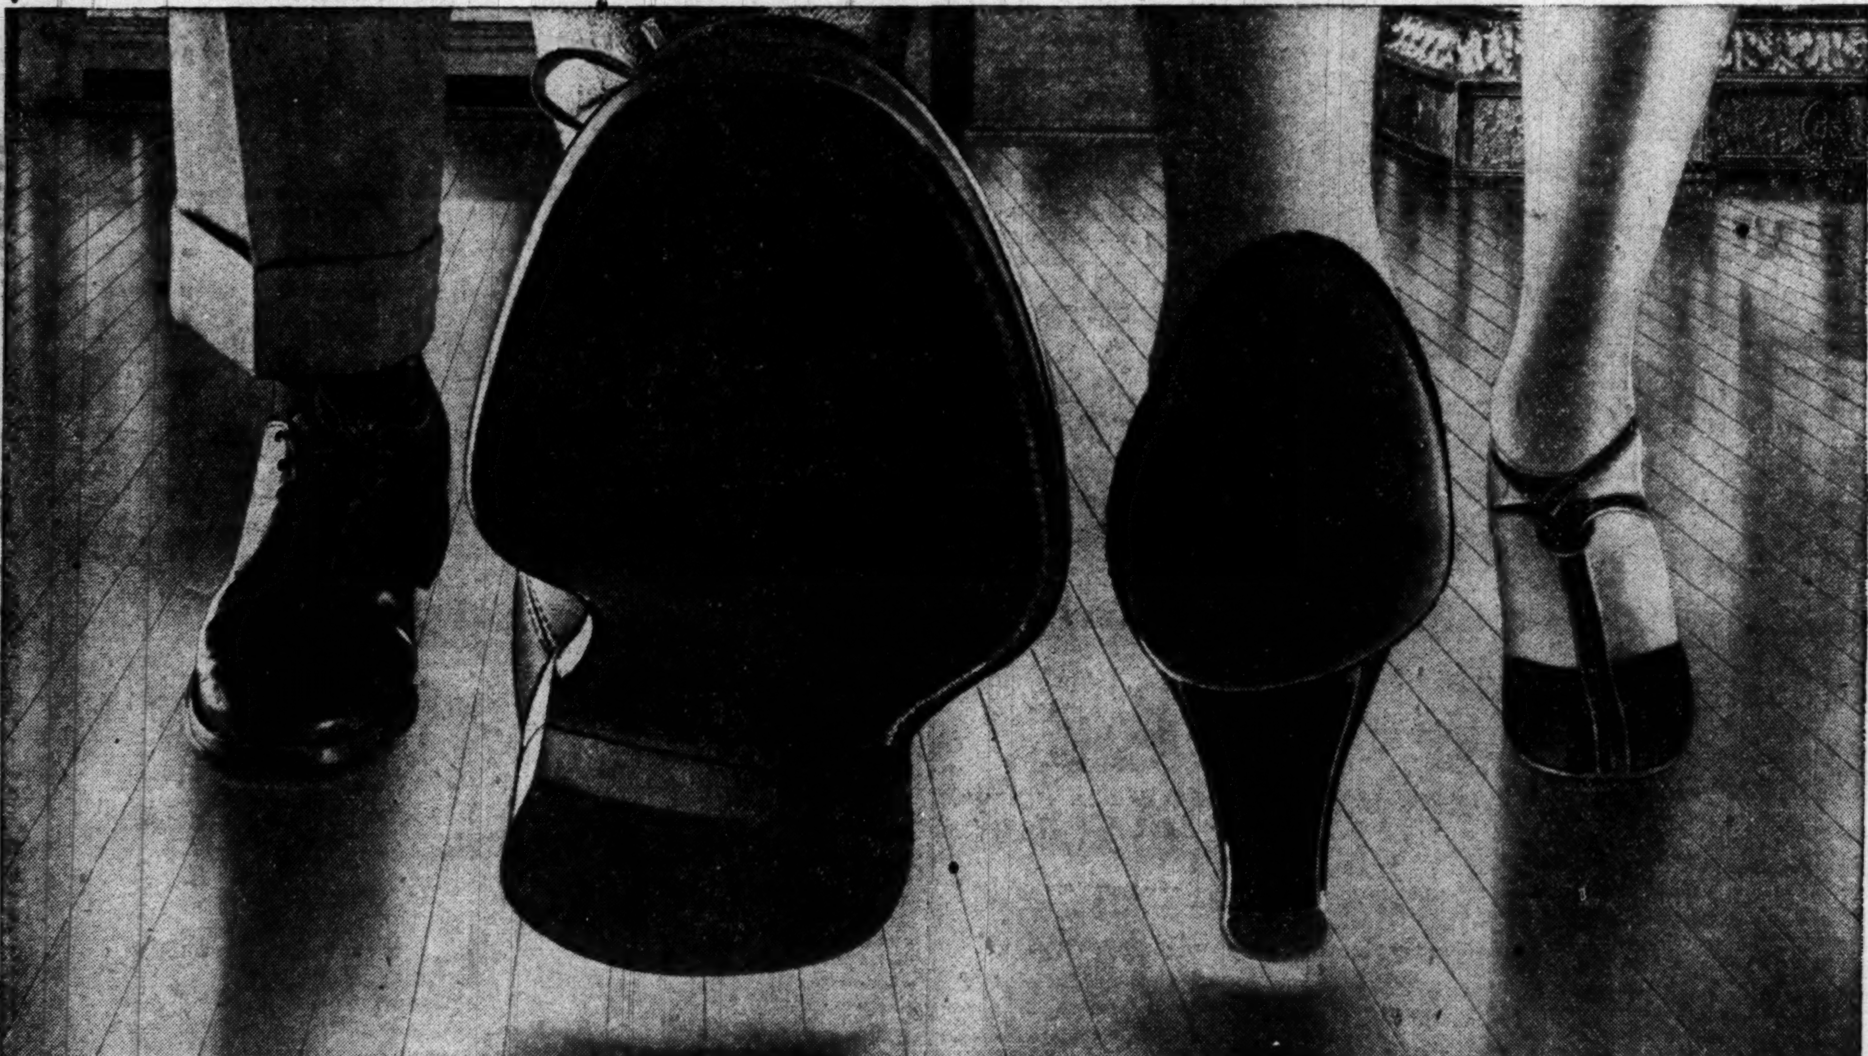
3 LONGER WEAR—Costs less per week! No paraffin in this new wax! Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax is rich in pure Carnauba wax imported from Brazil (see pictures, bottom left) for extra shine and ruggedness. Its resilient coating is "a bear for wear."

4 LESS CARE! So easy to apply, Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax is just as easy to keep up. The durable Carnauba wax in Gold Seal wards off dirt, resists water. Wipe up spattermarks and mud. Damp-mop it, too. Here's new ease in floor care!

Now From GOLD SEAL... Who Brought You 'GLASS WAX'† and 'wood cream'†

New Self-Polishing Floor Wax ...Proved Better All 4 Ways

Under Foot All Day Long, Floors Get 'Tired', Too



Gold Seal Floor Wax Shines Without Buffing; It's a 'Bear for Wear'

A new self-polishing floor wax from the Gold Seal Co. today offers homemakers from coast to coast the easiest way to brighten floors since floors were invented.

It's Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax from the makers of "GLASS WAX" and "wood cream," now on sale at food, drug, variety, hardware and department stores.

In eight Upper Midwest states, Gold Seal has been a floor-shining favorite for seven years, thousands of women finding it "a bear for wear." Long-time fans will be more pleased than ever with the new Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax now available nationally.

Tests in homes and laboratories have proved Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax to be "Better All 4 Ways":—

1. Shining Lustre! Rich in pure Carnauba wax from Brazil for a lovelier, more brilliant shine!

2. Anti-Slip! Tested for anti-slip quality by Underwriters' Laboratories . . . yet it isn't sticky.

3. Longer Wear! Costs less per week! Protective Carnauba wax in Gold Seal adds to wear as well as lustre! No paraffin or synthetic waxes in THIS wax!

4. Less Care! So easy to apply, so easy to keep up! Wards off dirt that grinds into unprotected floors. Resists water. Cleans with damp mop!

All this without buffing or rubbing. Just spread on Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax. It shines by itself!

Good for All Floors— Rubber and Asphalt Tile, Too

Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax is ideal for linoleum, hardwood, tile and terrazzo floors—and the ONLY type of wax safe for rubber and asphalt tile.

Satisfy yourself that Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax is "Better All 4 Ways"! Get it today—59 cents a pint, 98 cents a quart. Its shining lustre is "a bear for wear."

BRAZILIAN NATIVE clips Carnauba palm's waxy fronds. Their wax coating, which protects the tree through dry spells, becomes the base of the finest floor wax—Gold Seal—to shine and protect your floors.

Wood Floors ... Any Floors ... need wax protection against the beating they get all day. Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax, new from the makers of "GLASS WAX," gives a tough, elastic cushion—kind to your floors, comfortable under foot, with wonderful shining lustre. Today, get Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax, 59 cents a pint, 98 cents a quart.

Harvesting Carnauba ... to Enrich Your Floors

LABORIOUSLY HARVESTED, Carnauba fronds are carried by burros to drying fields and threshing sheds. One palm yields only a few ounces of wax.

EASILY APPLIED, Gold Seal Self-Polishing Floor Wax shines floors in minutes. Rich in Carnauba wax for shining lustre, it's "a bear for wear."

Businessmen Warned of Socialism

Members of the National Small Business Men's Association, Inc., were told last night that it is the joint job of business and education to keep socialism at bay.

"American business and American education," said Dr. Franklyn Bliss Snyder, 65-year-old president emeritus of Northwestern University, "have one great task in common; a task so important and so difficult that all minor obligations are insignificant.

"That task is to combat the insidious but steady encroachments of socialism upon our national life," he told association members at a dinner in the Hotel Statler closing their annual meeting. In the audience were a large number of Congressmen.

Declaring "socialism is like old age, it creeps upon one unawares," the Illinois educator said, "already too many Americans are working to bring it into being.

"No one can object when these radicals air their opinions," Snyder said. "They are merely exercising the right of free speech. But I wish the right-thinking conservatives would exercise the same right."

Earlier in the day the approximately 500 members, businessmen from 36 States, took to their representatives on the Hill the association's recommendations for sharp cuts in Federal taxes and spending.

The association's recommendations include:

1. A $6,400,000,000 slash in President Truman's $42,400,000,000 budget for the fiscal year 1951, and elimination of all subsidies not directly essential to national defense.

2. Speedy adoption of those sections of the Hoover Commission report not yet acted upon.

3. Revision of Civil Service practices "from the present method of basing the supervisor's pay on the number of employes under his direction to a plan of compensation under which supervisors are rewarded for efficiency and low cost operation."

Called "Double Taxation"

The association urged removal of what it called "double taxation" on corporation dividends, and repeal of war-imposed excise taxes on such things as furs and jewelry.

It also proposed taxing cooperatives and commercial and industrial activities of nonprofit groups on the same basis as private business.

With reference to labor legislation, it asked: amendment of the Taft-Hartley Law to ban industry-wide bargaining; revision of anti-trust laws to make them applicable to labor unions as well as to business; and "repeal of the Wage-Hour Act, Walsh-Healy Act and all similar legislation."

The association also urged removal of all "subversive individuals" from Government service, and rejection of "all proposals such as socialized medicine, federalized education, socialized farming, FEPC, valley authorities, 'political' housing, and every other proposal which would mean more concentration of power in the Federal Government."

County to Hold Convention for School Board Seat

Plans for a countywide nominating convention to select a slate of candidates for the Montgomery County Board of Education seat to be filled May 1 were disclosed yesterday.

John M. McIntire, P-TA Council president and convention committee chairman, said the convention, to be held March 27 at Leland Junior High School, Bethesda, will be open to all non-political and non-sectarian organizations.

Names of the candidates selected will be forwarded to the governor of Maryland who makes the board appointments.

H. Stanley Stine, of Silver Spring, is the board member whose term expires this year.

House Approves Tax Cut Plan as Maryland Assembly Comes to Abrupt Adjournment

Annapolis, March 2. (AP).—Many bills up for a final vote were sloughed off by the abrupt adjournment today of the Maryland Legislature.

The House did squeeze in a Republican reply to one of the administration's tax-cut measures. It approved, effective next year, a 2 percent rate on the first $500 of unearned income — dividends, pensions and the like.

The reduction from 5 percent would cost the State $225,000 a year, the comptroller's office estimates.

Lane's proposal, which was enacted last week, chops the rate only for persons who receive no more than $500 in unearned income and no more than $10,000 from all sources. This would save taxpayers about $159,000 a year, he judged.

Prevailing Wage Group

After a short but lively hearing, the ways and means committee reported out and the House passed finally a bill establishing a new "prevailing wages" commission. The group, made up of heads of State agencies and labor representatives, would determine equitable rates of pay for men working on State construction projects.

The Legislature also authorized up to $100,000 for smog control. The 1950 budget includes $10,000 for this purpose, but Lane has said additional money might be found in the general emergency fund.

Teen-age drivers were cautioned about reckless driving. One act sent to the Governor would revoke licenses held by boys and girls under 21 who repeatedly violate traffic laws.

The lawmakers previously had accomplished the main task of the session.

Tax Cuts Approved

They had approved income and property tax cuts—effective at once—to leave some $2,750,000 in Maryland purses that otherwise would have been paid the State treasury.

And they enacted a gigantic budget for 1951. It totaled $143,557,308. Along with it, they approved deficiency appropriations for the remainder of this fiscal year, ending June 30, that totaled $642,256.

The appropriations bill, including budget and deficiencies, ran up to $144,203,564.

Earlier today the Assembly approved the setting up of a University of Maryland building authority.

The bill passed by both Houses names the board of regents as the authority and provides for issuance of revenue bonds for financing 16 projects at College Park and Baltimore.

There was no debate on the measure. The Senate vote was 19 to 6, the House 92 to 17.

The 16 building projects would include three dormitories, ten fraternity and sorority houses, an athletics building and two student recreation buildings.

60-Day Sessions Killed

At the eleventh hour, the Assembly today killed a plan for annual 60-day sessions.

Senate President Byrnes (D., Baltimore Fifth) said the Senate, in a 48-minute executive session just before adjournment, agreed to retain the 30-day budgetary sessions in even years.

The proposed constitutional amendment to make all sessions two months long will be referred to the legislative council for study.

"The concensus here was that we should do nothing about it," Byrnes said.

Meanwhile the House of Delegates took a futile parting slap at Maryland's property tax assessment system.

It passed by a 69-40 vote a measure to provide district spot checks to insure equitable treatment in the rotating assessment system.

The House reversed yesterday's five-vote defeat of that measure on a motion by Delegate McKewen (D., Baltimore Second).

Under the continuous assessment method, the counties and Baltimore City are divided into five districts. One of these is fully assessed each year, the whole subdivision in five years.

School Fund Shortages Hit In County

Shortcomings of the Prince Georges County school system were laid to lack of adequate funds in a public forum last night when 20 members of the County Board of Education Staff answered questions.

The forum was staged by the Prince Georges County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations. Questions were prepared in advance and submitted by individual P-TA groups. The meeting was at the J. Enos Ray elementary school, Takoma Park.

The board staff members specifically mentioned the school health program, musical instruction, transportation of pupils, and inadequacy of instructional supplies as being directly caused by shortages of funds.

They also said that lack of space in existing schools, another result of money shortages, is responsible for inability to carry out some of the programs in the way they desire.

G. Gardner Shugart, superintendent of schools, said that the budget for the current school year, as originally presented to the Board of County Commissioners, requested more funds for some of the activities than were granted by the Commissioners. He said the requests will be renewed in the budget now under preparation for the 1950-51 school year.

Few Area Measures Passed in Maryland

Annapolis, March 2.—Delegates representing Washington areas introduced about half a hundred bills during the 1950 session of the Maryland General Assembly—which ended here today—and they were lucky to get a small handful of this number passed.

Because of the restrictive nature of the 30-day session, both Montgomery and Prince Georges delegations frankly expressed little hope for most of the local measures which they dropped into the hopper during the sessions. This pessimism was justified by the Assembly action, which in most cases left these bills stalled in the House Rules Committee.

Of the measures which did emerge for final passage, the Sothoron bill for reorganization of the Prince Georges County government is far and away the most significant.

In all, the Prince Georges delegation introduced, as a body, 27 bills. At session's end, S-43—the Sothoron bill—had passed, as had HB-92. A bill to redefine legislation passed in the 1949 session affecting the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission (its legality had been questioned); a bill to authorize WSSC to supervise house connections within its jurisdiction; and a bill to permit WSSC to float a million dollar bond issue for storm drainage.

Aside from delegation bills, HB-45, introduced by George G. McLeish, got through both houses on the next to last day of the session. The bill outlaws sale of contraceptives in vending machines throughout the State of Maryland except in restrooms where alcoholic beverages are to be consumed on the premises. Railroad, bus and airline terminals are specifically exempt from this exception.

The Montgomery County Delegates, as a body, introduced 19 bills. Of this number, here are the bills that got favorable Assembly action:

A bill to increase the sale and expenses of the sheriffs of Montgomery and Cecil Counties; a bill increasing from $400 to $600 the allotment per child for children suffering from cerebral palsy; participating in the State education program; a bill increasing the number of jury panels to cut down the amount of time each juror may serve; a bill giving Montgomery County additional powers to borrow money on uncollected taxes; a bill putting prisoners under the jurisdiction of jail wardens when in Montgomery County Jail.

In addition, a bill introduced by Delegate Julian P. King providing penalities for improper loading o ftrucks resulting in highway hazards received favorable action.

Virginia Senate Passes Byrd Tax Cut Bill; House Adds $500,000 a Year to Teachers' Pay

Richmond, Va., March 2 (AP).—The Byrd income tax cut bill went winging through the Virginia Senate 32 to 5 today over minority objections it would mean the end of money for conditional appropriations or else invite a retail sales tax.

Action on passage of the bill came quickly after the Senate defeated an amendment by Senator Ted Dalton that would have deferred any tax cuts until 50 percent of conditional appropriation items were realized.

And Senator Robert O. Norris, one of three co-patrons on the bill with Senator Harry F. Byrd, jr., apparently expressed the will of the Senate majority when he cried out:

"As God is my judge, of all the classes of people that need relief, it is the taxpayer at this time."

While the Senate disposed of the Byrd bill, at the other end of the capitol the House remained embroiled with debate on amendments to the 588-million-dollar general appropriations bill.

Relentlessly the administration majority beat down attempts of a minority bloc headed by Delegate Robert Whitehead of Nelson to cut out all salary raises for upper bracket officials and to add funds for public welfare and libraries.

However, the Whitehead group scored one impressive victory when it succeeded in adding $500,000 a year for teacher salaries to assure properly qualified teachers salaries above the minimum of $2000. The vote on this was 62-33.

Another tax reduction proposal—this on the House side—found favorable going in the House Finance Committee. The group reported out, 7 to 3, a bill by Delegate Shirley T. Holland of Isle of Wight to grant a 10 percent across theboard income tax reduction.

Debate on the Byrd bill automatic tax decrease if general fund revenues reach 99 million dollars was touched off by the amendment by Dalton, one of the two Republican members of the Senate.

Dalton's proposal would have put a stop order on tax cuts the bill contemplates until revenues reach a point sufficient to take care of half the conditional appropriation amount on a pro rata basis. At present some 40 million dollars in conditional appropriations are in the budget bill.

Fighting the amendment, Byrd said it was not correct to say that the bill would remove all money available for the conditional outlays. He argued that the bill wouldn't touch any surplus on hand at the end of this fiscal year, June 30—which he said would probably be a substantial amount.

He added that any excess on hand next year between the estimated 95 million dollars and the 99 million dollars point at which the first reduction would go into effect would be available for conditional appropriations.

There is a "cushion" of four million dollars which could conceivably be used for the conditional appropriation items, he said.

Damm Flays Mistakes in Virginia Bills

By a Post Reporter

Richmond, March 2.—Damm is a familiar word to Virginia legislators.

But Delegate George Damm of Arlington would like to set the record straight.

He told the House of Delegates today that his name had been inadvertently listed among copatrons on bills to regulate the sale of livestock and to require examinations of sheriffs.

"A couple of cattlemen weighing about 250 pounds wanted me to 'submit' to an amendment, and the sheriffs are on my neck," Damm declared.

Henceforth, he continued, the House can rest assured that "any time you see my name on anything except progressive legislation for Arlington County and important Statewide bills, you can put it down as . . .

"A 'Damm' mistake."

'Crying' Doll Rescued As Girl, 2, Dies in Fire

Oklahoma City, March 2 (AP).—Carolyn Thompson, 2, suffocated in a fire here today as a smoke-blinded fireman carried her "crying" doll to safety by mistake.

Fireman Bob Coley crawled through smoke to the baby's bed, felt something wrapped in a blanket, and pulled it off the bed. It cried just like a baby. On a third attempt he found the baby's body.

Judges' Pay Bill Filed In Virginia

Richmond, March 2.—The General Assembly was asked today to authorize salaries for two associate circuit judges for the Virginia area near Washington.

Delegate J. Maynard Magruder, of Arlington, introduced a bill to provide salaries for the jobs between March 15 and June 30, when the current fiscal year ends. Annual pay is $4667.

Governor Battle sent down a special message to accompany the bill, since the deadline has passed for introduction of such legislation by members alone.

The two judges will be elected before the assembly adjourns as provided in a Magruder bill already passed. The salary bill had Delegates George Damm, Arlington, and Armistead L. Boothe, Alexandria, as co-patrons.

One judge would be assigned to Arlington County, the other to the circuit embracing Alexandria-Fairfax-Prince William.

Two Virginia Fights Lost by Area Senators

Richmond, March 2.—Two Washington area legislators lost major battles in the General Assembly today.

Senator Charles R. Fenwick, of Arlington, blasted the "automatic" income tax reduction plan introduced by Senator Harry F. Byrd, jr., of Winchester. But the Senate whipped up a 32-5 vote for the bill.

Delegate Armistead L. Boothe, of Alexandria, tried to amend the House appropriations bill to assure welfare agencies increased unconditional appropriations. His amendment was defeated, 49-41.

Would "Shackle Itself"

The Byrd bill provides a scale of percentage decreases in individual and corporate income taxes if general fund revenues exceed 99 million dolars—four million dollars more than anticipated in the 1950-52 budget.

Fenwick said the State would merely "shackle itself" to spend no more than 95 million dollars for government services.

If revenues exceed the four-million-dollar "cushion" between anticipated revenues and the 99-million-dollar basis for tax reduction, the entire surplus would be returned to taxpayers through a 10 percent tax cut, Fenwick said.

"Just as sure as I am standing here," he added, "the next move would be to provide State services through a sales tax."

Localities Not Consulted

In the House of Delegates, Boothe said welfare appropriations were made on the State level when localities "weren't even consulted." They were based on 85 percent of minimum needs for aid to dependent children and 94 per cent needs for old age assistance, as provided by the 1948-50 budget.

When localities made their needs known after they had "pared their budgets to the bone," the State saw fit to make $1,800,000 available, but in conditional appropriations, Boothe said.

The House appropriations committee approved an amendment to set up $500,000 of this total as unconditional.

Capt. Richitt Says Talk to Hill Probers Led to His Transfer

inquiry. Hyman I. Fischbach is counsel for the inquiry.]

"Barrett said Fischbach was also concerned about gambling cases in the Seventh Precinct," Richitt said. "And he wanted to know if we had made any cases and to let him have a report." Captain Beverly Beach of the Seventh Precinct was also present at this interview with Barrett Richitt said.

[Police Exhibit No. 1, filed with the subcommittee, showed that in neither the Thrid nor the Seventh Precinct was any arrest made for a serious gambling violation during the year that ended June 30, 1949. Each of the precincts showed one arrest during the year for gambling misdemeanors.

[The report showed 332 arrests for major gambling charges, and 325 arrests for gambling misdemeanors, for the city as a whole.]

[Commissioner Young could not be reached for comment. Reporters were told that he was "in bed" and could not be questioned.]

Called Himself "Warring"

"On the same day (of the call from Barrett)," Richitt told newsmen, "back at the precinct I got a call from a man who identified himself as Emmitt Warring.

"Don't you ever come by here"? the voice asked Richitt.

"Yes, once in a while," Richitt said he said.

"Can't you come by? I want to see you," Richitt quoted the voice.

"No, I can't," Richitt said he answered.

The former stunt motorcycle patrolman spoke slowly, reading from notes. His wife and daughter were present throughout his press conference.

"I said if you want to see me, come by the office," Richitt said.

"You know I don't want to do that," Richitt said the telephone voice answered, "Do you really want me to come to your office?"

"If you want to see me you will," Richitt said he replied.

"I then told Corporal (George) Clausy and Private (Ernest) Reid in my precinct not to leave the office" Richitt said.

"Finally Lieut. James L. Rochford told me that Emmitt Warring was out there and wanted to see me. I had seen Warring maybe three or four times before. I'm sure it was he."

Glanced Toward Reid

"He came in and I told him to sit down and I sat down and he glanced toward Reid," Richitt said.

"That's all right," Richitt said he told Warring. "He's OK. He sits where he is."

"And then in a very low voice Warring asked me if I had heard about the committee being concerned about gambling cases in Number Three."

"No, I haven't," Richitt said he answered. "I believe Warring used the words Number Seven," too, because of what followed. Warring said he had just talked to Beach, too," Richitt said.

"Has anyone called you about it," Richitt said Warring asked.

"No," Richitt said he answered.

"Then I (Richitt) said I thought that the hearing didn't start until next week and asked him (Warring) if he had appeared before it, meaning the committee and wondering how he knew."

"Oh, no. The Boss called me," Richitt said Warring answered.

"He was leaning over close to me and speaking in a low voice, and I replied 'The Boss'?" Richitt continued.

"Yes, the Major," Richitt said Warring replied.

"Oh, Barrett called you," Richitt said he answered.

"Yes," Richitt said Warring replied.

Mentioned Private Houses

"He (Warring) kept saying there were no (gambling) places in Number Three, unless I wanted to go in private houses, and I could not go in there without a warrant. He mentioned private houses several times," Richitt said.

"I kept saying I wasn't worried. I wasn't worried about the committee," Richitt said. "And then I broke in on him."

"You really made the headlines recently, didn't you," Richitt said he asked Warring. "He glanced at Reid and said that he had not made headlines, but that his cousin had."

"Your cousin," Richitt said he asked.

"No, that was me," Richitt said Warring admitted again in a low voice."

Warring and his brother-in-law William Cady were held up and robbed of more than $20,000 January 9 at his home, 3900 Macomb st. nw.

"Now, how did they find out about it?" Richitt said he asked Warring, meaning the newspapers.

"I called the Boss as soon as it happened," Richitt quoted Warring.

Started Beating Cady

"And then he went into the details about how it happened," Richitt said. "How the men entered with crates of oranges, and as soon as he opened the door two men came in and started beating Cady and set him on a chair near a table. He said Cady reached for a gun that was there and that he dropped the gun and reached down to pick it up by the barrel when they saw him and beat his hand and broke bones in four places," Richitt said. "I don't honestly recall asking him how much money he had lost."

"Then Warring broke off and said 'I'd like to see you some time'," Richitt continued.

"Well, here I am." Richitt said he answered.

"Reid was present with Warring," Richitt said in answer to an interruption. "I asked him how much of the interview he heard and he said he was working and did not want to make it too apparent that Warring was under surveillance."

"Warring had his right hand in his pocket and he was jiggling his hand back and forth, and then he said, 'No, I mean you have been here over a year and I haven't seen you yet'," Richitt said.

Richitt Quotes Warring

"I want to take care of you," Richitt said Warring told him.

"No sir, not me," Richitt said he replied.

"It's OK," Warring said, according to Richitt.

[Reached at home, Private Reid confirmed Captain Richitt's version of the Warring visit to the precinct.

[Read the statement by Captain Richett, the police private at first hesitated to comment, "You put me in a tough spot." Then reminded that his name was mentioned in the report of the meeting, he said:

["Yes, Warring said it all right. I was in the room during the conversation."

["It appeared to me that Warring seemed to want me to leave."

["Yes, I heard him say the Boss had called him.

["Yes, he said the boss was Major Barrett."

[Lieutenant Rochford also recalled the Warring visit:

["Warring was waiting at the captain's door, I asked him if he was waiting for the captain. He told me he was, so I told the captain. The captain said he would see him.

["I opened the door and let him in and then I had to leave. I had a detail or something," the lieutenant said.

[Captain Beach, also mentioned in the Richitt report, left the No. 7 Precinct Wednesday morning on a two weeks' leave in Miami, Fla. Precinct officials said he was driving and would arrive there today.]

Throughout Richitt's press conference his telephone was ringing. On one occasion Maher called and Richitt told his daughter to say that he would be busy for at least an hour. Before the press conference started Richitt told The Washington Post that Maher had called him. "He said he wanted me to know that Commissioner John Russell Young still considered me as a friend."

[Warring, who has been called a gambling kingpin in Washington, was convicted in 1939 of conspiring to defraud the Government of income taxes on profits of his reprted multi-million-dollar numbers empire.

[He served a three to nine months sentence on this charge in addition to a 26-month sentence for tampering with the jury which first tried him for the conspiracy.]

"After I got home from the precinct," Ritchitt continued, "I called Beach and told him what had happened and, I believe the next day, I spoke to Inspector George R. Wallrodt and told him."

Couldn't Figure the Angle

"Beach said that Warring had followed him into a jewelry store and talked to him. Beach told me he couldn't figure out what Warring's angle was," Richitt said.

"Then I got a call—I don't recal the exact date—from Bill McLeod and was called up to the House Office Building and the committee. He told me to come right away. It was very important," Richitt said.

William M. McLeod, jr., is the clerk of the House District Committee.

[McLeod said "I do not care to make any statement, I never make a statement on matters pending before the District committee unless authorized to do so by the chairman of the committee or of a subcommittee." The Davis committee was set up by the District committee under authority of a House resolution.]

"McLeod told me Fischabach wanted to have me on the stand during the investigation. I told him I did not know what to say. Then he called in Fischbach and I told him this whole story," Richitt said.

"Then Fischbach asked about different officers in the department. He didn't ask me about Barrett. Fischbach opened up this way," Richitt said:

"I (Fischbach) might say this. A high-ranking officer has been here to see me and told me a lot and he mentioned your name and said you were one man who had the courage to stand on your own two feet. He told me this after I promised him I wouldn't put him on the stand," Richitt said Fischbach told him.

He Was Still on Duty

"And then if you'll pardon me, Ann," Richitt said to his wife, "Fischbach told me this officer was ——— ——— scared."

"At this point," Richitt said, "it was about 4 p. m., and I was still on duty and I called the precinct. My clerk said Major Barrett wanted me to call right way on a very important matter. I called from the Capitol, and went down to his office." Fischbach, McLeod and Richitt were the only persons present at the first Hill conference, the captain said.

Capt. Beverly Beach   Inspector Wallrodt   Asst. Supt. Letterman

"Beach was already in Barrett's office when I got there," Richitt continued. "They evidently had been talking for some time. Barrett said they had fed this committee a lot of stuff and they were supposed to hold an executive (closed) session and then all of a sudden they weren't going to hold the executive session."

"Barrett told us that when Maher got through with Fischbach, there wouldn't be much left of him." Richitt said.

[Maher said last night that his relations with Fischbach during the crime inquiry had been "friendly and cordial."]

"Then I went back to the Hill, without Beach," Richitt said. "Inspector Oscar J. Letterman, Insector Wallrodt, assistant inquiry counsel John Woog and McLeod were there."

"Fischbach wanted to know what Barrett had wanted. I told him and told him what Barrett had said Maher would do to him. Then Fischbach called in Chairman Davis," Richitt said.

"Davis was introduced and Fischbach told him what each of us did in the police department, and then asked me to tell Davis what I had told him, and I did," Richitt said.

"Davis listened very attentively, and then turned to Fischbach and said 'Investigate this'," Richitt said. "He thanked us and walked out."

Fischbach then asked me if I would go before the Attorney General and say what I had said. And I told him I would go before anyone and say it," Richitt continued.

"That's your story," Richitt said. "I said I was going to shoot the works and I'm going to do it. A week ago I was going to quit. Now, I'm going to get fired. They are going to have to fire me. I won't resign now.

"I have spent more than 25 years with the department, and I've seen them bury better men than me before this. But here's one man that's going to fight."

Also transferred as an outgrowth of the shift of Richitt to the "sticks" were:

Reporters asked Richitt to comment on Commissioner Young's charges that he had been "insubordinate" to superiors, and had been "inefficient" in operating the Third Precinct.

"I was called to Major Barrett's office last October and talked to Inspector Truscott (assistant superintendent of police)" Richitt said. "This was after Inspector Clarence Lutz had made a written report about me.

"The substance of Lutz' report was that he could never find me in the precinct—that I was always at Blair House (temporary White House).

"I told Truscott my side of the story. I told him the special details at Blair House were set up by Secret Service, and that I was required there."

Truscott thereupon, Richitt said, went into "the next office," came back and told the captain Barrett's recommendation was "to forget about it."

Richitt continued that after his trip to Key West accompanying President Truman last December, Lutz presented another report. He said the report was turned in January 5.

"On that day Lutz came into the Third Precinct and told me that the Major (Barrett) and the Com-Commissioner (Young) didn't want me around the Blair House, and they didn't want a lieutenant there either.

"A sergeant or a corporal would be enough," Richitt quoted Lutz.

Richitt said he asked Lutz why, and Lutz replied:

"Just headquarters."

Richitt then asserted to Lutz that he wanted to be taken before the Police Trial Board, and that if that "didn't happen" he would resign.

"I'm sick and tired," Richitt charged, "of this petty jealousy!"

"Lutz told me not to be foolish. You can't resign without notice."

At this point, Richitt said, he took off his gun and his badge and handed them to Lutz.

"Lutz then called Major Barrett and Major Barrett said he wanted to see me."

Richitt said he offered Barrett his resignation, but Barrett refused it.

Richitt told Barrett Lutz had

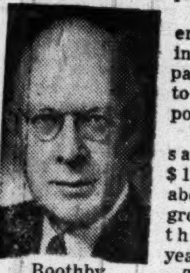
Gas Firm Sets New 101-Year Sales Record

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington Gas Light Co. in 1949 rang up a new 101-year sales record, but net income was slightly less than in the previous year.



Boothby

President Everett J. Boothby in the annual pamphlet report to stockholders pointed out:

Volume of sales reached $19,177,000, about 5 percent greater than in the previous year.

Total meters in service amounted to 262,688, a gain of 10,600 new customers for the year and a better than 46 percent increase in 10 years.

Operating expenses of $16,979,000 also set a new high and were up 143 percent in 10 years.

Net income of $1,471,000 was about $4000 less than in 1948. Net per share was $1.68 against $1.69 in 1948.

Construction outlays for 1949 totaled $4,347,000, bringing total plant account to 59 million dollars. This was an increase of 32 million dollars in the past 10 years.

Payrolls amounted to $8,140,000 in 1949 and average basic pay of all employes more than doubled since 1939.

At a special meeting of investment bankers yesterday afternoon in the Washington Hotel Boothby declared that any new financing plans this year will be held in abeyance until the company sees how much is realized from the sale of its unused West Station. The company, it is understood, is asking three million dollars for the property.

The gas company's annual report this year is contained in an attractive 28-page illustrated booklet which sets a new high standard for property.

OFFERING: Baltimore Trotting Races, Inc., has filed with the SEC a proposed offering of a million dollars in 5 percent debentures and 110,000 shares of $1 par common stock. Stocks Remain Steady as Coal Crisis Deepens

New York, March 2 (AP).—The stock market stolidly clung to a steady course today while the effects of the coal shortage grew worse by the hour.

At the closing bell, gains and losses were almost exactly matched. Changes were limited to minor fractions for the most part.

During the morning the market showed an inclination to advance but demand was tepid at best.

A minor relapse followed a "not guilty" verdict in the Government's contempt action against the United Mine Workers. Some early gains were either trimmed or wiped out. There was no concerted selling move, though, and the price curve soon levelled off. In some cases, minor recoveries developed.

WHAT STOCKS DID

	Thur.	Wed.
Advances	412	546
Declines	409	281
Unchanged	279	289
Total issues	1100	1116

Trading picked up speed after the contempt decision and turnover for the day reached 1,340,000 shares. This compared with 1,410,-000 Wednesday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks dipped .1 of 1 point to 73.7. The industrial and utility groups were unchanged but rails showed a slight average loss.

The market continued to register the belief that the coal strike would be called off in the immediate future in the face of almost complete lack of evidence to that effect.

Traders now seem to be pinning their hopes on Government seizure of the coal mines.

Long Legal Fight Still Ahead In Kaiser-Frazer, Otis Tangle

By J. A. Livingston

THE decision of the board of governors of the National Association of Securities Dealers to suspend Otis & Co., Cyrus Eaton's Cleveland investment banking firm, raises a neat legal question: Can a man be put out of business for standing on his common law right to refuse to answer a question?

If Eaton is forced out of the NASD, he's as good as done for as an investment banker. He couldn't participate in underwritings with major investment firms. He would not enjoy the privileges of "inside markets" in over-the-counter trading. He'd have to confine himself to his iron ore, shipping, coal and steel properties and his Shorthorn cattle.

Livingston

But Eaton's a resourceful man, and he has a resourceful law firm, Arnold, Fortas & Porter. He's far from a goner, even though in February, 1948, when Henry Kaiser charged that Otis & Co. welshed on an underwriting agreement, the case seemed clear against him. At hearings before the Securities & Exchange Commission, Herman T. Birr, jr., president of the First California Co., which was associated with Eaton in the deal to underwrite 900,000 shares of Kaiser-Frazer stock at 11½ testified that Eaton said to him: "Anyone who kept his commitment when he would lose money is a sucker."

Eaton managed to stop the SEC investigation through an injunction and carried the case through the Supreme Court, which set aside the injunction. He also got the NASD enjoined from proceeding to investigate independent of the SEC. But that injunction was ultimately dissolved.

NOW, two years after the event, something definite has happened. The Business Conduct Committee of the NASD suspended Otis & Co., effective April 29, for failure to answer questions on the Kaiser-Frazer deal.

Yet the case could easily drag on for another two years while Otis & Co. does business at the same old stand. As one bedraggled attorney put it: "That's due process of law for you. It takes time." To date, the typewritten transcript in all proceedings has cost $14,000.

The NASD opinion said: Ours "is a busines in which absolute candor and integrity are cardinal principles. We buy and sell millions of dollars of securities by word of mouth. A telephone conversation in our business is as abiding and definitive as the most elaborate contract in other lines of commerce . . . Within the guild of securities dealers, the members are expected to disclose what they have said and done in relation to the conduct of their own business . . . It had never occurred to us that any detail of our business dealings could be hidden from committees authorized to enforce our standards of ethical conduct."

Thurman Arnold, head of Arnold, Fortas & Porter, contends that the NASD is acting like a "private club," and that Otis & Co. won't be "private clubbed" out of its livelihood. Further, he said that Otis & Co. is unwilling to answer questions concerning vital information while Kaiser-Frazer is waging a civil suit for damages against it.

THE QUESTION the NASD wants answered is this: Can Eaton prove he did not inspire a stockholder's suit brought in Detroit by James F. Masterson, a Philadelphia attorney, against Kaiser-Frazer? Otis & Co. said the Masterson suit materially changed the condition of the corporation, and on the basis of it, canceled the underwriting agreement.

On learning of the NASD suspension, Eaton declared: "I am delighted with the decision because it gives us the opportunity to take the association into an impartial tribunal and give them the works." Strange. An event which for so long he tried to prevent by legal maneuvers he suddenly welcomes!

Otis & Co. can appeal to the SEC, which automatically stays the NASD suspension. Then the SEC verdict can be carried to the United States Court of Appeals, and after that to the Supreme Court, if it will take the case.

However, the SEC is still investigating Otis & Co. Therefore, it may prefer to table the NASD suspension and follow through on its own. In acting on the NASD suspension, the SEC would merely pass on the right of the NASD to suspend a member for failing to answer a question. That would not resolve the fundamental issue: Did Otis & Co. inspire a lawsuit to escape an underwriting commitment and a financial loss?

Chicago Grain

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—A cent or more was clipped of the value of new-crop wheat today following news of snows in parts of the major producing belt.

Aside from the weakness in new crop wheat, the grain market showed very little change. Some profit-taking developed in the distant months in soybeans, which have enjoyed a brisk rise over the past few weeks, and at one time lard displayed strength. Otherwise, the market did little.

Wheat ended 1⅜ lower to ¼ higher; corn was ⅜ lower to ⅛ higher; oats were ⅛-¼ lower; rye was unchanged to ½ higher; soybeans were ¼-1⅛ lower and lard was unchanged to 3 cents a hundred pounds lower.

CORPORATE DIVIDENDS ROSE TO NEW RECORD IN 1949
Washington, Feb. 10 (AP)—U. S. corporations paid out in 1949 the biggest total of cash dividends—$6,495,800,000—in history.
The Commerce Dept. said the total was 7 per cent above 1948. It computes only publicly reported dividends. Many corporations with few stockholders make no public announcement of dividends.
The auto industry's payments were up 50 per cent.

All Day School

The League of Women Voters of the voteless District of Columbia will conduct today the ninth installment of what has become a valuable local institution—its annual one-day school. The subject is to be one of the most pressing of contemporary problems—"Our Growing Government and Individual Freedom." The league's sponsorship assures a thoughtful, searching, nonpartisan exploration of this problem. The session will last all day at the Statler Hotel, will have nationally known authorities as its lecturers and will be open to the entire public, men and women alike. The kind of education provided here is an important contribution to the democratic process.

Li On Chiang

The Administration's White Paper on China gets an unexpected postscript from no less a person than Li Tsung-yen, still Acting President of China, who has been in the United States for medical treatment. Acting President Li is incensed by the report from Formosa that Chiang Kai-shek has reassumed the Presidency of China. The law on the matter is buried under the general chaos, but Li is quite sure of it. It has been known ever since Chiang left Li in the lurch in Nanking and bolted to Formosa with both the government's treasury and its military establishment that their relations were bad. Li, however, kept his mouth closed out of loyalty to China, letting Chiang's friends in America repeat their nonsense without the slightest correction, though his representative in Washington, Dr. Kan Chieh-hou, could not resist expressing his opinions in private in highly picturesque, though allegorical, form. It was not till Chiang reassumed the Presidency that Li let loose, and now he has thrown the book at his former chief, and with remarkably non-Chinese pointedness.

This is what Li says of Chiang:

> Chiang long ago lost the confidence and support of the people. What he depends on are the troops under his immediate command, but really they cannot be depended upon. We know that all the troops he commanded surrendered to the Communists, without a fight, as soon as they were in contact with them. They never fought, just surrendered, not because they liked communism, but because they hated Chiang.

Li goes on to attribute the downfall of the Nationalist regime to Chiang himself. So irate is Li that he says that now he has been restored to health, he will himself go to Formosa and wrest the government out of the "usurper's" hands. That would be a most remarkable turn in the comic opera which has been going on in what the New Yorker calls the GOP's satellite state of Formosa.

Restricted Science

The best that can be said of the repressive loyalty test tacked onto the National Science Foundation bill in the House is that it is better to have the bill with the restriction than not to have it at all. There is a good deal of comfort in the fact that with passage of the Priest bill the foundation has overcome its last major hurdle. Already the country's science has begun to suffer from inattention to pure research. The evaluation of research programs and the impetus to original inquiry that the foundation will provide through scholarships and other means will benefit defense as well as nonmilitary applications.

In the atmosphere of the Fuchs case it would have been impossible to ward off a thorough investigation of all foreign nationals associated with the foundation program, and this requirement by itself is not unreasonable. The same cannot be said for the amendment sponsored by Representative Howard Smith. This requires the FBI to attest to the absolute loyalty and belief in the United States form of government of every employe and student, and to certify, moreover, that such persons have never been members of any organization declared subversive by the Attorney General. The implications of the last clause are obvious. Not only does it place a tremendous burden on the FBI, but it also rules out many persons who might have associated innocently with an organization later declared subversive. In short, it deprives the country of the services of many perfectly loyal persons, some of whom undoubtedly are numbered among the best scientific minds.

The principle here is what is important. The great bulk of the research to be sponsored by the foundation is unclassified and has utterly no bearing on security. The Smith amendment introduces a political means test—something especially distasteful to scientists jealous of their freedom of inquiry—not on any genuine requirement of security, but as a catch-all proposition. Mr. Smith could just as consistently require such an investigation of all persons receiving Federal funds, say every student benefiting from Federal aid to education. Where is this absurdity to stop?

Skirting Defense

Nothing very decisive has come out of the House Armed Services Committee report on the Navy-Air Force controversy last fall. To be sure, the committee study on "Unification and Strategy" is a remarkably thorough and fair review of the hearings, but it does not attempt to resolve many of the points at issue. Where it does draw specific conclusions, these, in our opinion, are off the beam in several important respects. For example, the firing of Admiral Denfeld is declared to be purely a "reprisal," and by implication Navy Secretary Matthews is pilloried. Then the committee recommends the utterly unworkable addition of the Commandant of the Marine Corps to the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and it proposes to constrict leadership on the Joint Chiefs by rotating the chairmanship among the services.

It is difficult to understand the committee's reasoning that the removal of Admiral Denfeld "struck directly against . . . civilian control of the Nation's defense through the Congress." Precisely the opposite seems to us to have been the case. It would have been intolerable to allow Admiral Denfeld to thwart his civilian superior. This was not merely a question of Admiral Denfeld expressing his views before Congress; there is plenty of evidence that he lent his influence to the fight prior to the congressional hearings. Secretary Matthews' letter to the President indicates that Admiral Denfeld's fitness was cast in doubt several weeks before his testimony.

The inclusion of the Marine Commandant on the Joint Chiefs of Staff would be absurd because the Marines are not a coequal service. It would create an embarrassing administrative situation to give a Marine officer responsible to the Chief of Naval Operations an equal vote with him. More serious, it would provide an additional Navy vote on the JCS and thus permit one service to frustrate the other two. The result could well be to hogtie the Joint Chiefs; this is hardly the way to bring about the understanding of Navy problems that the committee wants. The rotating JCS chairmanship seems to us no less unwise. It would be foolish to force the choice of an inferior man just because he happened to be in line. The JCS chairman should be an elder statesman, beyond ambition or narrow partisanship. Why should a Bradley be prohibited from following an Eisenhower?

Understandably the committee skirts the complex issue of strategic bombing; it seizes instead upon "the more basic question" of whether individual service viewpoints are adequately represented. Assuredly such viewpoints should be weighed carefully, but not to the point of indecision. The country must have one strategy, not three. Nor are the services competent to be the sole judges of their own weapons in warfare. They must have primary responsibility for development, to be sure, but weapons must jibe with over-all strategy. What developments to push is a matter that concerns all three services, especially in the best use of limited funds. In this respect the report raises a nice question as to whether present standards of aircraft obsolescence and procurement are supportable without a larger budget.

Many of the other recommendations—more unified tactical air training, more cross-education, more information for Congress—are incontestable, though more information for Congress should not imply congressional interference in defense management. We are particularly gratified o note the importance the committee places on a firm definition of long-range war objectives by the National Security Council. Such principles are basic to all military strategy, and the need for long-range thinking in this respect cannot be stressed too often.

Tale Of The Ruble

The ruble does not circulate outside Russia, and the dollar or sterling, which is tied to the dollar at the present rate of $2.80 to the pound, is used as the basis of measurement in foreign trade deals with Western countries. Thus the revaluation of the ruble will have little effect on Russia's trade with this part of the world. However, it might mean that in future the U. S. S. R. intends to put its barter trade with satellite countries on a ruble basis. If that happens, the terms of trade will be altered to their disadvantage, since the Russians by keeping ruble prices for exported goods unchanged could demand more goods of their satellites in exchange.

The announcement that the special diplomatic rate of exchange fixed at eight rubles to the dollar is to be changed to a six-ruble rate, and abandoned after July 1 will, however, result in a large boost in the already extremely high costs of the United States Embassy in Moscow. That is one way of fleecing foreigners. The increased value of the ruble in terms of gold may also portend cuts in Russia's own gold production, since gold mining is being carried on at great cost at the present time. It is surmised that Russia may be planning to obtain additional gold supplies at the new parity rate for rubles from Romania and other satellites. But that is sheer speculation.

The explanation given for the revaluation of the ruble—that is, its increased purchasing power as the result of the decreased purchasing power of the dollar—is balderdash. It is, of course, true that the purchasing power of the dollar has declined owing to inflation, while successive reductions in Russian prices since the currency reforms of 1947 have raised the purchasing power of the ruble. Nevertheless, the ruble is still grossly overvalued today at the existing official rate of dollar exchange. Russia could not do business with the outside world on the existing exchange basis, if the ruble were used in international transactions. Its value in terms of comparative purchasing power is only an inconsiderable fraction of the 25 cents that is the new decreed exchange value.

The attempt to link the ruble to gold instead of dollars is also a meaningless gesture. The dollar is today the one currency that is generally accepted in international payments. Moreover, the price of gold and its exchange value is determined largely by our willingness to buy gold at a fixed price in dollars. Russia is not tying her currency to a stable standard of value by setting a fictitious gold price for her currency. This is just another way of taking a slap at this country, and reproving us for our admitted failure to prevent a postwar inflation that has unquestionably lowered the purchasing power of dollars.

Not Guilty

Judge Keech's verdict of not guilty is based on the failure of the Government to prove beyond a reasonable doubt or by clear and convincing evidence that there has been willful contempt of the court's restraining order, either by actions taken or by a failure to act. In 1949 when John L. Lewis and the UMW were cited for contempt, convicted, and heavily fined, it was shown that the union had not attempted to restore normal production. This time Mr. Lewis promptly ordered the strikers to return to work, and these instructions on their face were unambiguous. The verdict is only justified in the absence of convincing evidence that the union has not acted in good faith. However, Judge Keech himself probably had some doubts as to whether union appeals to the miners were made in good faith. This is shown by his admission that the strike may have been ordered, encouraged, or in some way permitted by means not appearing in the record.

Although the verdict is based on sound reasoning, it will not convince the average citizen that the miners are acting as individuals when they defy court orders to return to work. Moreover, it is evident that officials of the UMW could have taken more aggressive steps to deal with local disturbances. And, as Judge Keech pointed out, they might have revoked the charters of local unions that voted not to obey the back-to-work order. We are forced to conclude that the Government bungled again by failing to provide more convincing evidence to prove its case.

Regardless of the verdict, the miners and the union, too, will be held responsible by the public for their defiant refusal to end a strike that imperils the health and safety of millions of their fellow men and is fast bringing about industrial paralysis with its attendant evil, unemployment. The question of immediate concern is what to do next. There is still a possibility that an agreement might be reached this week between the operators and the union; otherwise seizure of the mines by the Government is the inevitable last resort. President Truman said yesterday that he has the inherent power of seizure in face of a national emergency. Presumably he will exercise that power without waiting for authorizing legislation if the strike continues. The President's waiting game—inspired, as we think, by political motives—has been a losing venture. He is paying a high price for his delay in resorting to the emergency provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

Nonsegregated Travel

Although the Boothe bill to end racial segregation in public transportation has been killed by the Virginia Legislature, the amount of support it gathered was indeed heartwarming. No less a figure than former Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., now president of the University of Virginia, indorsed the move. Mr. Darden's opposition to such segregation is highly practical; as Governor he observed that the law was not enforced during the war, and that the friction it caused was "dangerous, difficult and unnecessary."

As a matter of fact, it is for such practical reasons, rather than on moral grounds alone, that progress is being made in many other aspects of race relations in Virginia. The inconvenience of laws requiring segregation in transportation and in public places makes no sense. The same may be said of most of the humiliations forced by law on a large segment of Virginia's citizens.

Actually, as Benjamin Muse pointed out in his column on Virginia affairs in this newspaper the other day, Mr. Boothe merely voiced courageously the feeling of many persons who are ashamed of the legal monuments to race prejudice. It may well be, in fact, that the Legislature has lagged behind the thinking of the public. Attitudes, to be sure, cannot be legislated, but if the artificial obstacles to better race relations are removed, in all probability other adjustments will take care of themselves. In this respect the race relations commission envisioned by Mr. Boothe, properly staffed and working quietly without publicity, should assist in removing tensions. The defeat of the Boothe bill must be counted only a temporary setback, for the fact that it provoked a great deal of serious discussion is an encouraging sign of a growing trend.

A DP's Answer

With deep regret I have read the February 23 letter from F. S. Wilson concerning the DP problem.

I do not think Mr. Wilson was quite fair calling displaced persons "parasites," and I would like to point out that concentration camps and jails in Germany as well as those in the USSR do not give him the right to abuse anyone in such a manner. We learned communism in real life, not in theory. We work hard now as farmhands, butlers, dishwashers, factory workers, etc. I admit we sometimes are not quite good at these jobs, which is not surprising, since once we were lawyers, physicians, scholars, writers, artists, etc. But still we are doing our best.

I arrived in this country three months ago. A lawyer in the past, I worked for four years after the war with UNRRA and IRO as a child research and tracing officer. I am not going to relate in detail a long story about how all my family was murdered by the Bolsheviks and what we experienced at that time.

I have now accepted a butler's job and am willing to do my best at that. I am proud of my present work. I also receive many letters from my friends and I see that their employers are quite satisfied with them.

I wonder, therefore, who gave Mr. Wilson the right to call us "parasites"?

We scarcely paid any attention to the Germans calling us "slaves" during the war but, believe me, we feel it unjustified to be called "parasites" by a representative of an allied nation.

As to our loyalty, I am sure that all of the "parasites" would be, in case of danger, the most loyal and ardent fighters against communism which we do know from personal experience and not from the distance as Mr. Wilson probably does.

Navy Uniforms

Admiral Sherman is to be congratulated on his order that naval aviators shall wear blues like other officers. The rift between the nonaviation and aviation Navy is far greater than is realized and is, in fact, as wide, if not wider than between any other two components of our military forces. It can and should be eliminated.

The primary cause of the ill feeling is special privileges. The aviation green working uniform is a good example. This uniform, an exclusive aviation privilege, is well tailored, designed for comfort and efficiency, and provides a practical and attractive change from dress blues in winter, just as the khaki uniform does in the summer.

All naval officers wear the cotton khaki work uniform in the summer; why should not all officers be permitted to wear the green working uniform in the winter when appropriate?

I therefore strongly recommend to Admiral Sherman that, if unification within the Navy is his aim, he follow up his order with a unified policy regarding uniforms for all. NAVY WIFE.

Guests From Russia

As one step toward peace, why should not our Voice of America, each night for the next 12 months, begin its broadcast to Europe and Russia with an invitation to the Soviet government to select 25,000 heroes of the Red army to visit the United States for six weeks?

Such an offer of an open hand could not conceivably be accepted by the Russian leaders today. The United States would have, consequently, scored a most spectacular propaganda feat. Let the Cominform and the commissars lie and distort as much as they will, their arguments could sound but lame.

If the offer were accepted, we should go through with it in good faith. Bring these men over here in our ships. Show them our country, our people, and return them home, 25,000 ambassadors of American good-will. DICK SHEA.

Fictitious Freedoms

Much Utopian talk is still heard, concerning the freedoms which will be established tomorrow (it is always tomorrow!) But what about some assurance from New Deal dreamers that freedom from excessive taxation, with its accompanying fears, is being contemplated?

Despite our enormous resources, liberty from lack has never been attained. The idea to "tax and spend" eternally is fundamentally unsound and hardly conducive to mental serenity. Hence, just as long as crackpot politicians preach that deficits are desirable and debt an undisguised blessing, taxpayers will be haunted by the fear of want and the even greater fear of a foggy future.

Disintegrating Defense

Our Congress believes in increasing the budget for the furtherance of atomic production. If our intent is to compete with the Kremlin from a military standpoint, and the bomb race points in that direction, the pertinent question arises: Why the red light for an all-out defense program against atomic attack?

My intention is not to be tactful regarding our Secretary of Defense. Our Navy is in mothballs, our ground forces are on extended furlough and our Air Corps is spending its time on air gymnastics. At a most crucial moment our Joint Chiefs of Staff are being defeated in their legitimate and imperative endeavors by the anorexia of a presidential apple polisher.

As the figures stand, Russia is in the military lead as was Germany in 1939. However, the shadow of atomic warfare was not hovering over our heads from 1939 to 1945. The odds then and now leave no comparison to be discussed regardless of the fact that we were the victors. I challenge Mr. Johnson to prove his statement in facts that we could "lick the hell out of Joe Stalin" now.

Pearl Harbor was no joke. It was an insult to our intelligence as well as a costly and dangerous injury to our moral self-obligation. The main platform of a democracy is not, to be sure, the demonstration of military prowess, but in the light of the axiom, a defense must be established to preserve this democracy from an all too possible annihilation. Must we again have to drink "poison" to learn it will kill us? CITIZEN.

Ways To Peace

The White House has just repeated the pronouncement of the State Department that the time is not ripe—the people not ready—for superfederation.

Time is not the fusing element. Nor proximity. Otherwise the countries of western Europe would not still be disunited after a thousand years.

What makes for fusion is the application of fire and pressure. We democracies have hydrogen bombs over our heads and communism closing in all around us. What are we supposed to be waiting for?

Fourteen resolutions in a row, favoring the Atlantic Union Resolution, have gone in from this corner of south Georgia. More are to follow.

STELLANOVA OSBORN.
Poulan, Ga.

Our scientists have been warning us that the A-bomb we have and the H-bomb are enough to destroy civilization. But I don't want to die. I don't want my children and my baby grandchildren to die. Is it easier for us to face destruction and death knowing that our bigger and better bombs will destroy more Russian Stefans and their families?

There are some people in the United States who think that we here can not be safe until the Russians are wiped out. It has been tried. Some of us paid a blood price and it didn't work. Those people want to try it again even at the risk of annihilating civilization and after them the deluge.

Thank God there are still some sane people who appeal to the President to get together with the Russians and plan for peace.

S. R. H.
Washington.

Worse than any peril from abroad is the way we accept the H-bomb, yet reject proposals to improve American-Soviet relations. Since we want peace, why do we ignore the recent American Friends Service Committee Report, and follow, instead, a course apparently charted by sadists whose objective is a genocidal war against Russia?

There's but one way out of this deadly dilemma. We must abandon war completely. We must, ourselves, disarm, and we must stop arming other countries. The wealth thus saved should be made available for prosperity-producing projects at home and throughout the world, regardless of prevailing political and economic systems. Whatever risk this program would entail, our present gamble is infinitely greater.

SAMUEL MICHAELSON.
Philadelphia.

If one has to live with a big, rough neighbor, there are a few things it is not wise to do. One shouldn't make a face at him every time he looks his way. He shouldn't shake a fist at every approach and neither should he wrangle over all the differences of opinion which they happen to hold every time they speak. Good relations and salesmanship tell us rather to work on matters upon which we can agree.

Both Russia and the United States are deeply concerned with education; we are both interested in the health of our workers; we are both concerned with better housing; and we would both like to conquer the common cold and find a control for the deadly cancer. These are a few of a multitude of problems common to both countries. Our great good country must have some people who have learned to get along with people whom they do not like.

There is little satisfaction in debating which hemisphere is likely to be blown to pieces first. Our immediate task is to see that this doesn't happen to either.

Lesson From The Finns

By Marquis Childs

Under Danger's Sword

THERE may be something about living under danger which produces a steadiness of nerve. The example of Finland comes immediately to mind.

A month ago rumors began to circulate widely both in Moscow and in Helsingfors that the Soviets would denounce the Russian-Finnish peace treaty. They would take this step just prior to the election by the Finnish Parliament of a President who would almost certainly be the venerable Juho Paasikivi. Always within the correct framework of the treaty, Paasikivi has taken a firm line toward the Soviet Union.

The Finnish Communist Party is believed to have been given secret assurances from Moscow that at the proper moment the Kremlin would issue a blast. This would be coordinated with threatening moves within the country, such as a Communist march on Helsingfors.

In preceding weeks the propaganda barrage against Finland had been stepped up, growing more menacing and hostile. It was directed at the leaders who were holding the line of political independence.

This was in accord with the pattern of conquest directed against Czechoslovakia in February of 1948. From both within and without every element of attack would be directed toward breaking down the resistance of groups loyal to the concept of an independent democracy. It worked in Czechoslovakia, partly, of course, because such a thorough job of infiltration had been done well in advance.

AS THE day of the election approached, tensions in Finland mounted. The threatened march seemed about to materialize. Finally, an explosion occurred in the Parliament building itself.

But Moscow at the last moment did not come through with the denunciation of the treaty. Or, to phrase it more cautiously, that has not yet occurred.

The Finns have shown that they have good nerves. They have demonstrated that they do not crack under strain. In my opinion this is one reason Moscow refrained from delivering the ultimate blow from the outside.

The Finns had prepared themselves insofar as possible by cleaning Communists out of government positions where they could do damage. They had weighed the risks against the danger. It was not easy, since the Communists had polled approximately 20 percent of the total vote.

It is just possible that the United States, a country of 150 million people, can learn from the example of Finland, a country of four million. Above all, it is the lesson that there is no absolute security in the world today and that it is essential to face up to and learn to live with the risks that exist.

Some stern measures have been necessary in Finland. But the freedoms of a democratic state have not been abrogated. The Communists freely publish their newspapers; they freely electioneer both in the general elections and in the trade unions.

THE UNITED STATES—the Territory of Alaska is an exception—is several thousand miles from the borders of Soviet Russia. Oceans separate the two powers. The Communist Party in this country is hardly more than a fraction of 1 percent of the total voting population.

Yet too often the reaction in this country seems to be one of jittery panic. The face that we show the world seems to be frightened and uncertain. It is as though we doubted our own strength and even our own institutions.

As the Finns have shown, you must take every possible step to meet the danger. But when this has been done, you must be prepared to live with reasonable calm with the risks that are for many peoples like the hazards of the weather, of intense cold and blizzard.

IN HIS Reader's Digest article, George F. Kennan, Counselor of the State Department, writes of the intense interest of the rest of the world in this country and its material development. "What the outside world is more eager to know," Kennan adds, "is whether we are capable of coping with the sociological and spiritual strains placed upon us by all this abundance. It is eager to know whether we are going to be able to retain, in a mechanized environment, the individuality, the emotional tone and the civic vigor of earlier generations of Americans."

Those are words well worth pondering. And so is the example of the steadfast people of Finland, who live always under the sword of danger.

Truman and the Press

The majority of Americans, I am sure, would marvel at the forbearance of the President at his news conferences. Why he undergoes such a strain, knowing full well that the truth he speaks will be twisted, is a mystery.

Many of the reporters at these conferences write for one or the other of the great new chains which fight Truman constantly. Even if these men wanted to be fair, they could not be, for they must follow the policies of their employers or lose their jobs.

Mr. Truman has a perfect right to give his views only to the correspondents who will pass them on without distortion to the voters. It is not only his right but his duty to do so.

WILLIAM OWEN.

Matter Of Fact

By Stewart Alsop

Cold Wars Can Be Won

AT THIS dark turning point in the cold war, a sense of defeatism and impotence is spreading like a fungus throughout the Government, the Congress, and the country. Yet this is the richest and most powerful nation on earth, standing at the head of a confederation of free and brave peoples. We need not be impotent, if we choose to use our strength.

George Kennan, the brilliant State Department planner, has written that, as a basic requirement for peace, we must create "a situation of fact" which will cause the Kremlin to reverse its policy and abandon its dream of world domination. It is absolutely clear that this "situation of fact" is not now being created. If it is to be created, how must our strength be used? To what ends must our efforts be directed? How much of our resources must be mobilized? The answers to these questions lie in the following program, which represents in rough dollar terms a sort of crude, simplified consensus of those experts who must now remain publicly silent.

THE FIRST essential is to meet the challenge of Soviet rearmament. The defeatists would have it that the military problem is insoluble. It is not.

In November, 1948, the late Secretary of Defense James V. Forrestal presented to the President a military budget of $16,900,000,000. In the judgment of Forrestal, whose wisdom becomes more apparent with every passing day of folly, this sum was sufficient to give reasonable security to the United States. A further sum will be needed to help give our allies that "sense of their own military security" which Kennan also postulates as essential to continued resistance to Soviet pressure. Over-all, in dollar terms, what is necessary is an increase in the annual military budget of five to seven billion dollars, tapering off as our allies are rearmed.

The doctrine that this will lead to war is demonstrable folly. What will invite Soviet aggression—what has already invited Soviet aggression wherever it has existed—is weakness. This outlay will not provide the Western confederation with aggressive strength, nor will it begin to match the military effort of the Soviet Union, whose whole economy is now dedicated to preparing for war.

Yet the aggressor, by one of the oldest and best military rules, requires a ratio of strength of 3 to 1, and the proposed outlay should thus be enough decisively to deter any aggressive Soviet adventures. Less than this, surely, the wealthiest, the most populous, the most productive nations on earth, cannot do.

IN THE political and economic sphere, the Western confederation is quite as directly threatened as in the sphere of strategy and simple power. The economic insecurity of the British Commonwealth; the resulting British reluctance to participate in the organization of Europe; the consequent impossibility of building a structure into which Germany can be safely fitted—all these are problems as acute as they are vast.

Yet again, these problems can be dealt with. In the case of Britain, for example, it will cost this country 10 to 16 billion dollars annually to fill the power vacuum that will be created, if economic crisis forces Britain to go out of business as a world power. We have not got this capability. Yet the annual deficiency which is driving Britain toward this disaster for the whole confederation of the West amounts to no more than one billion dollars.

The contrast speaks for itself. But the essential point is that dealing with all these problems will mean, at least temporarily, further drafts on American resources. The time for half measures is past. The whole job, of building a solid structure in the West and dealing with Soviet expansion in Asia, must now be done, even if it adds a further burden of two billion dollars or a little more per year, which is about the outside figure.

THESE MEASURES, both military and economic, are essentially defensive. If Kennan's "situation of fact" is to be created, it is also necessary for us to take the offensive in the cold war, as the Soviet Union has consistently done since before the last war ended. The way to take the offensive is by a massive propaganda effort, combined with those clandestine methods which the Soviets are already using on a gigantic scale. If we enter this field of effort with energy governed by prudence, gradual but vital changes may be confidently expected in many different and crucial situations all over the world. For this purpose, something like 500 million dollars should suffice.

Stated in rough dollar terms, such is the hard program which the wisest of the experts privately but unanimously agree is required if we are to make a serious effort to win the cold war and thus secure a dependable settlement with the Soviet Union. If economies are not made elsewhere, as they certainly should be, the total effort would increase the budgetary imbalance between 8 and 10 billion dollars. But cold wars, like hot wars, cannot be successfully waged with one eye on the budget.

During the last war, the budget was unbalanced by 50 billion dollars annually, yet we ended the war with our national income tripled, and our wealth increased. This is the correct perspective in which to see the problem. And just to make the perspective a little clearer, it may also be remembered that the penalty for losing the cold war will be slavery or death.

without avail. They'll meet again today.

Keech Cites Difference

In his memorandum decision, Judge Keech observed that this case is different from the 1948 contempt proceedings, in which the union was fined $1,400,000.

In 1948 it was shown that the union had made no attempt to restore normal production. In this case, Keech said, the union sent out numerous communications instructing the miners "to return forthwith to work."

"This court does not hold that any telegram or combination of telegrams or letters would constitute a good faith compliance with an order directing action on the part of the union," the decision said.

"It does hold that, where the union has sent communications such as are included in this record, the apparent good faith of such communications must be controverted not by mere suspicion based on failure to obtain results, but by clear and convincing evidence, if they are to be ruled by the court of law to constitute only a token compliance."

Judge Keech observed that the union had testified, as a show of good faith compliance, that since the antistrike injunction had been issued, the union had withheld all financial aid from the strikers. "There was no attempt to disprove this testimony," the jurist commented.

Might Have Revoked Charters

According to the evidence, Judge Keech noted, the union might have taken one "affirmative action" which it did not take—revocation of the charters of all the locals participating in the strike. This omission in itself is not enough to prove contempt, the judge declared, because the injunction directed the union to take "all appropriate action," and the Government failed to show that such action would have been appropriate.

Three hours before Judge Keech announced his decision, the President told his weekly press conference at the White House that he would not discuss possible seizure of the mines while the matter was still pending in the courts. He indicated that he felt he had "inherent powers" to seize the mines, although that was something involving a fine legal line. In response to another question, he said the White House always had on hand technical drafts of presidential powers in case it were necessary to invoke them.

On Capitol Hill, advocates of seizure stepped up their activity.

A seizure bill, described as an "Administration bill," has been drafted by Representative Cleveland Bailey (D., W. Va.), a champion of the miners. His bill would give the Government the profits of the seized mines. In the past, Lewis has been quoted as saying the miners would return to the pits if the Government, in fact, seized the mines. Members of Congress sympathetic to the miners believe that seizure will end the strike.

Lucas Sees "No Alternative"

Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), said he saw "no alternative" except to seize the mines. Senator Wayne Morse (R., Oreg.), introduced legislation authorizing the Government to seize the struck mines for 60 days. Several administration senators are also in favor of such a move.

Senator Taft announced he would seek a Senate investigation of the way the Government handled the contempt case, and of the coal strike itself. The Ohioan said that he had been informed 60 affidavits in support of the contempt charges had been given to the Justice Department by the operators, but that these had never been used in the trial.

The affidavits, according to Taft, were signed by persons present when local union officials told the miners that the telegrams and letters from John L. Lewis, instructing them to return to work, could be ignored. Taft suggested that new contempt charges be filed against the union on the basis of the affidavits.

Earlier in the day Representative E. E. Cox (D., Ga.) said that the coal stoppage has developed to the point of "insurrection against the Government . . ."

"I'd put it down if it called for the use of soldiers to do it," he said.

There was no comment over the verdict from John L. Lewis, but John D. Battle, executive vice president of the National Coal Association, said the Government did not prosecute as "vigorously" as it could have.

The preliminary antistrike injunction, which the union was accused of violating, runs out today. Judge Keech is expected to act today on the Government's request for an extension of the order into the 80-day restraining order permitted by the Taft-Hartley Act.

Court Has Discretion In Contempt Cases

The distinction between civil and criminal contempt is a legal fine point of little practical importance in the present case.

Generally speaking, criminal contempt is punitive, that is, intended to punish for some past contempt.

Civil contempt proceedings are primarily designed to prevent a recurrence or continuation of a contempt that is causing injury.

Virginia Mine Tipple Seized

Richmond, March 2.—The State of Virginia extended its coal-producing operations today by seizing a Tazewell County tipple on orders from Governor Battle.

An estimated 2000 additional tons of processed coal mostly for household use will result daily from the seizure, Battle said.

The State is getting about 25,000 tons of coal a day from nonunion deep and strip mines that have continued to produce during the Nation-wide strike. The Governor has already seized a strip mine in Buchanan County.

Battle directed seizure of the Raven Ash Co. tipple near Raven, Va., at 9 a. m. today, when signs were posted indicating its operation by the State.

He acted under a law passed by the current session of the General Assembly, authorizing seizure of struck mines in an "emergency."

Never Cast National Vote

Keech, Miners' Judge, a Native Of Capital Without Party Label

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Judge Richmond Bowling Keech, who handed down yesterday's decision in the coal-mine case, is a 53-year-old Government career man without a political label.

JUDGE RICHMOND KEECH
"Beyond a reasonable doubt"

Like all those who were born here and have not established a legal residence elsewhere, he never has voted in a national election. Appointments have come to him from both Republican and Democratic Presidents. They have come to him on his merits, obviously, because he has never affiliated himself with either great party.

Judge Keech, who, in acquitting the coal miners of contempt, said he could not "convict on conjecture," was born November 28, 1896, in Georgetown. He attended public schools, including old Business High School, and then went on to study law at Georgetown University.

At Business High School, in the years 1913-15, he was a star fullback on the football team, and was chosen for the all-high team. Walter Haight, roly-poly turf writer for The Washington Post, who was a third-stringer on the team, recalled yesterday that Keech took his football seriously, was a speedy runner, a hard tackler, and had the nickname of "Bullet."

Keech broke off his studies at Georgtown University Law School in April, 1917, and enlisted in the Navy as an apprentice seaman. He served aboard the transport USS Matsonia, hauling troops to and from Europe, and was a chief petty officer when he was discharged in October, 1919.

He worked for a short time with the United States Shipping Board. Then he and a buddy, R. Edwin Joyce, now executive vice president of National Distillers, decided to become hoboes and see the country.

They wandered across the country, working in one place only to get enough money to move on to the next. They harvested wheat, worked as busboys and on one occasion, at a carnival outside Denver, played Africans in a game called "African Dip." The patrons tried to hit a target, and when successful dumped the African from his perch into a pool of water.

Keech, back in Washington, resumed his study of law. He got his LL.B. degree from Georgetown University Law School in 1922 and his LL.M. the next year. He practiced law for a time, and then, in 1925, went to work for the District of Columbia as assistant corporation counsel. He has been in public service ever since.

President Hoover named him people's counsel for the District in 1930, a post he held for four years. His next appointment came from President Roosevelt, who in 1934 appointed him vice chairman of the Public Utilities Commission. He resigned from the commission in 1940 to become District Corporation Counsel.

Over the years Keech acquired a reputation as a hard-working, intelligent and conscientious public servant. He was boomed for the post of District Commissioner from time to time, but he made it a point never to "run" for any office.

President Truman made Keech an administrative assistant at the White House in 1945. He thus became one of those aides supposed to have "a passion for anonymity." Keech, never one to court the limelight, remained at the White House only a year or so. Mr. Truman nominated him as an associate justice of the District Court on October 10, 1946.

Judge Keech is a bachelor and lives with his mother, Mrs. Annie Contee Keech, at 2746 Woodley rd. nw. His hobby is riding to the hounds. He is a member of the Potomac Hunt, and owns a small farm near Potomac, Md., where he stables mare, Ditty.

A square-jawed man with close cropped hair, Judge Keech is good humored but firm on the bench. In trying cases, he insists that counsel on both sides stick to the issue.

In the coal case, for example, counsel for the miners tried to bring in the fact that many miners are killed or injured in their work. Judge Keech cut him off. He remarked, smiling, that he wouldn't permit a discussion of the other side of the case—the possibility that pneumonia might become widespread because of the lack of coal.

Board Asks Boost in Pay To Jobless

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

Increases in amounts and duration of jobless payments here were urged yesterday by the District Unemployment Compensation Board.

In its fourteenth annual report to Congress, the board recommended that (1) maximum weekly payments be raised from $20 to $30, and that the maximum period in a year that a person could received payments be increased from 20 to 26 weeks.

These amendments to the D. C. Unemployment Compensation Act had been recommended last year by President Truman, the report pointed out.

It also recommended amending the act so employers would not be charged for compensation to their former employes who had resigned or had been fired for misconduct.

Board Director C. A. Wharton yesterday said the cost of living increase could be made without an increase, or at most by a very small one, in employers' contributions.

The fund from which payments are made consists of contributions from all employers in the District. Their payments range from 0.1 percent to 2.7 percent of their payroll.

Since 1936, the report said, the fund has grown to $45,076,696.

Total paid out as compensation last year, the report stated, was $3,960,758—highest ever. But the fund is still larger than a year ago thanks to interest received from the big invested balance.

The report stated that 224,857 checks were issued in 1949, and that more than 17,000 individuals drew one or more checks. Both were records.

CIO Assails Anti-Trust Labor Bill

The CIO said yesterday a bill to make unions subject to the anti-trust laws "would put the Federal courts right back in the business of breaking strikes.

The bill; introduced by Senator Robertson (D. Va.) and aimed at what he has called the "monopoly power" of labor organizations, is under study by a Senate Judiciary Subcommittee.

Arthur J. Goldberg, CIO general counsel, said the measure would be "disastrous not only to the American labor movement but also to the American economy as a whole."

The legislation, prompted in part by the current coal strike, would subject labor unions to the antitrust laws for reasonable restraints of trade in essential industries.

Goldberg called the bill "fantastic" and contended that in national emergency strikes employers, rather than the union, may be at fault by stubbornly refusing to bargain and insisting on their own terms.

laws in the Third and Seventh Precinct was the object of much concern to the committee counsel, and I directed them to be prepared to satisfactorily answer to the committee.

Captain Beach assured me that he could fully explain for the Seventh Precinct. Captain Richitt seemed indifferent. I have never received Captain Richitt's report in conformity with my order of February 1. That is one of the reasons that I transferred him.

As to the assertion that I talked with Emmitt Warring with regard to gaming conditions in Number Three and Number Seven Precincts, I wish to state that I have talked with Emmitt Warring on two occasions in recent months. Both of these conversations were on the telephone. Both were in connection with the Warring holdup.

Both were prior to February 1, 1950. In neither conversation was there any mention of the House Committee or gaming operations in Number Three, Number Seven or any other precinct.

shipments of poor quality coal, but the others were still empty-handed.

In Arlington County and Falls Church, a run has started on cord wood. One dealer said he had more orders than he could handle but he doubted that the wood would prove very warming. "It's just the psychological feeling that there's a fire burning someplace," Cleveland Harrill, manager of the Robert Shreve Fuel Co. in Falls Church, observed.

In Maryland, dealers in upper Montgomery County in the Rockville-Gaithersburg region were "bone dry" and were referring customers to suburban area dealers in Bethesda and Silver Spring. There it was reported "no one is being turned away but only small quantities are sold" and the supply may run out in a week.

In Prince Georges County, one of the principal dealers said he was issuing half-ton lots to "urgent cases" and had only 10 tons left. Other county yards were in a similar fix.

The State of Maryland started studying how to get coal from surplus stocks at area military installations, made available Wednesday by Defense Secretary Louis Johnson, in case institutions run short. Emergency Fuel Coordinator Walter N. Ruth met with Fort Meade, Md., officers on the matter.

Washington has not made any plans for borrowing from the armed services since it has a reserve of its own which is calculated to last another three weeks if carefully doled out to high-priority users.

J. Thomas Kennedy, chairman of the Fuel Coordinating Committee, announced that the Washington Gas Light Co. has added 2000 tons of soft coal to the city emergency stock. The coal was part of the firm's pile kept on hand in case natural gas supplies should fail to arrive.

The first 30 tons of the 5000-ton Potomac Electric Power Co. pile turned over to the city last week was delivered to six persons certified as in the emergency category, Kennedy said. Eight men were investigating other requests and one returned with a report that an apartment house had 82-degree heat.

Kennedy called the owner and gave him "a good bawling out" instead of an order for coal.

During the week, the committee has authorized delivery of 64 tons to Suburban Hospital in Bethesda, 15 tons to the Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly and 3 tons to the Washington Sanitarium in Takoma Park.

Three other requests from out-outlying areas will be considered by the committee at a meeting this morning. They were appeals from a 76-unit apartment development in Hyattsville, and 63-unit and 33-unit projects in Brentwood, Kennedy said.

His office will be open Saturday morning during the emergency period, he said.

The District gained about 6½ tons yesterday in an unorthodox manner. One of Kennedy's Weights and Measures Department inspectors found a Maryland man trying to sell a load of coal direct to consumers from the mines without a license.

Kennedy said he wouldn't press charges if the driver obtained a license and sold the load to a city coal dealer. This was done, Kennedy said.

TRANSFER—From P. 21

Richitt Tells Of Transfer

questioned him about the number of men required at a "tea" detail for Mrs. Truman. Barrett according to Richitt, said the captain could have as many men for such details as he needed.

"He told me: 'You have more men in your precinct who have won the medal of honor than in any other precinct.

"I replied," Richitt said, "Well, that's a hell of a way to show your appreciation—to start an investigation of my precinct on the day that I went away to Florida (November 28)."

Barrett, Richitt said, denied that he had started any sort of investigation.

"Then," said Richitt, "I questioned Barrett about him calling me down the night of Margaret Truman's recital at Constitution Hall and saying that my men and I weren't wearing the proper uniforms."

Richitt said he questioned Barrett about the superintendent's order that all commanding officers had to write him directly to obtain overtime leave.

Barrett's answer was that the order wasn't directed at him, but at some other captain.

[Richitt took five days' overtime leave while he was in Key West with the President, thus remaining with Mr. Truman five days longer than Barrett had. Barrett was reported to have complained about this extra leave.]

As a result of the conference, said Richitt, his resignation was torn up and the two men shook hands.

"After I got home Wednesday night I received a call from Barrett," Richitt said.

"Barrett said to me: 'I'd like to know who's putting this wedge between us. We have always been good friends.'"

Also transferred as an outgrowth of the shift of Richitt to outlying No. 8—in the "sticks"—were:

Capt. John E. Fondahl from No. 8 to special civil defense duty at headquarters.

Capt. Charles A. Sullivan from No. 2 to No. 3.

Lieut. Albert B. Clark shifted from No. 13 to acting captain of No. 2.

All the four officers reported to their new assignments at 8 a. m. yesterday.

Throughout the three-hour press conference Richitt emphasized that he "wanted to be heard," wanted thus to be cleared.

"I'm going to work tomorrow. And I'll be at Precinct Number 8," he said.

"I have no intention of resigning.

"But I want to be heard on all the charges—before the Congressional subcommittee or any other committee."

County Chests to Move To Silver Spring

All services of the Montgomery County Community Chest and Council will soon be housed under one roof.

They are moving to a county-owned building at 811 Pershing dr., Silver Spring, use of which was granted by the County Council last week.

PUC Accepts Schedule for 50c Phone Rate Boost

$2,250,000 Hike Bears Heaviest on Home Subscribers; Effective Monday

The District Public Utilities Commission yesterday approved new local telephone rates that will mean a 50-cent monthly increase to most Washington subscribers.

The new rates are effective Monday. They were proposed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. last week as its plan for apportioning among 660,000 customers here the $2,250,000 annual increase granted by the PUC February 20.

At a hearing Tuesday, PUC Counsel Lloyd B. Harrison criticized the new rates as bearing more heavily on residential customers than on businesses.

THE FEDERAL DIARY
By Jerry Kluttz Appears Today on Page 1.

He specifically cited the 22-percent increase on residential two-party line message rates. The average increase in business rates was 7.5 percent.

In answer to this criticism, the PUC order stated that "perfection in apportionment . . . among various classes of consumers is difficult, if not impossible of attainment."

It further pointed out that the two-party line message rate had not been increased in January, 1948, when increases were allowed for other classes of users. With this considered, "the disparity practically disappears," the PUC stated.

Under existing rates, the order said, the company's revenue is derived from three sources: residential, 43 percent; commercial, 39 percent; Government, 18 percent.

Under the new rates, it stated, these figures will be changed to: residential, 44 percent; commercial, 37.9 percent; Government, 18.1 percent.

Hatch Act Defended, Hit In Debate

Almost 100 persons last night attended a debate on the pending Stennis Amendment to the Hatch Act held at the Lyons Park Community House under sponsorship of the Arlington Democratic Club.

John W. Jackson, attorney and member of the county Democratic executive committee, supported the amendment. He said Government workers now have a "second class status politically."

"If it is wrong to be a Democrat and a Government worker, then it is wrong to be a member of the Arlington Better Government League political party," he declared.

He was supported by Conrad H. Reid, Government engineer, who said in his 25 years of civil service, he had felt "strangulated, and inarticulated by what I call the Hatchet Act."

He said, "I won't deny there is a State machine" in Virginia, but added that permitting participation by Government workers would help overthrow it.

On the other side were Harley M. Williams, substituting for County Board Member Daniel A. Dugan, who was ill, and Bertram Gross, both members of the Arlington Better Goverment League.

Williams said the effect of the amendment would be to allow "machine politicians" to ensnare Federal workers into actively working on campaigns.

Gross, a member of the staff of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the amendment was "ambiguous," would not permit a Federal worker to run for a position in local political units and failed to give employes sufficient protections against abuses resulting from the new powers.

Former Slave Celebrates His 111th Birthday Today

SLAVE AND FREEMAN—Asked the secret of his long life, 111-year-old Alexander Willis declared, "Only God knows . . ."

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Alexander Willis will be 111 years old today. Neighbors and friends will drop around home at 1816 11th st. nw. and congratulate him.

He was born a slave in Orange, Va. His life began over 20 years before the Civil War, extends through the projected H-bomb. He's aware of much, but not of the bomb.

Asked yesterday in a loud voice: "Do you know about the atomic bomb?" he replied: "Is it colored or white?"

Mr. Willis has had three wives, 25 children. One wife gave him 12 children, one 13, one none. Slave and freeman, he worked on Virginia farms, came here in 1928.

Mrs. Mary Colston, his landlady, says: "He gets around good." Warm days he takes walks. He shuffles along, goes over to the Vermont Avenue Baptist Church whenever he can make it.

Sitting close to the bellied coal stove yesterday, the snowwhite hair edging from beneath his skullcap, he was saying perhaps he wouldn't see another birthday. Mrs. Colston shushed such talk.

"I know I ain't gonna sit here another century," Mr. Willis then modified it.

He moved his long-fingered hands, which are astoundingly expressive and look like fine-grained leather. He was quoting the man who owned him before the Civil War, remembering that battlefield where . . .

"So many dead you couldn't step on the ground without stepping on bodies . . .

"And I asked my master: 'Why did they kill so many?'

"'Man was born to die,' my master said.'"

Mr. Willis looked at those grained hands.

"One has to get out of the other's way. If some didn't die, there wouldn't be enough for all to eat."

Mrs. Colston, white-haired and a bit stooped herself but young beside Mr. Willis and devoted to looking after him, told him to shush such talk now.

He was asked what you do to live so long.

"Only God knows, only the Lord . . . I wonder, too, myself. I know so many hundreds of people who are dead in bed. It's not because I've been so holy righteous. I've done some good . . . I done some bad."

He only knows, he said, that he owes his long life to the Lord. He looked up at the rows of scriptural quotations on the walls. One said: "I have been young and now am old yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken. Nor his seed begging bread . . ."

Another Use for Old String: It Can Beat a Traffic Ticket

It took the District Surveyor's office to prove what Joseph H. Brennan of 4522 14th st. nw., had known all along—his grandmother's ball of string had told him so.

Brennan, a free-lance writer, was charged with blocking traffic at an intersection near Eastern and Georgia aves. nw. He came into Traffic Court Monday equipped with maps and protested that he was innocent.

He argued that he didn't block traffic and even if he did, it wasn't at an intersection but merely at a parking lot entrance to the street.

He told Judge Armond W. Scott that the alleged blocking was 91 feet from the nearest intersection. That's where the string came in. Brennan had measured the distance with his grandmother's ball of string.

Judge Scott continued the case and called on the Surveyor's office to decide the point. The judge said that he has informed the surveyors agreed with Brennan and the case was dismissed.

"You ought to be a lawyer," said the judge. "You argue very convincingy."

"I have my law degree, your honor," said Brennan.

Auto Crash Proves Fatal To Man, 76

Calhoun Patterson, Ex-Federal Worker, Struck on Feb. 17, Dies in Hospital

Calhoun Patterson, 76, retired Government employe, died last night at Suburban Hospital of injuries suffered, according to police, on February 17, near his home. He lived on Frederick ave., Gaithersburg, Md.

Police said he was struck by an auto driven by William T. McGarrity of St. Clair, Pa. He suffered fractures of both legs and cuts about the head.

At the time, McGarrity was technically charged with reckless driving by colliding and released on personal bond for hearing at Rockville May 18.

7 Children Hurt as Truck Hits Bus Near Herndon

Seven Fairfax and Falls Church teen-agers escaped serious injury yesterday when a truck ripped the side off their school bus

The truck driver was charged with drunk driving.

The 54-passenger bus, owned by the Fairfax County school system, was returning from Manassas Regional High School, police said, when the accident occurred on Route 28, 4 miles north of Herndon.

A number of youngsters already had been dropped off, according to police, when the northbound school bus was sidswiped by the southbound truck, driven by Eugene L. Runyon, 35, of McLean,

Most seriously injured was Merton Thomas, 16, of 611 Shreve st., Falls Church, who suffered cuts on the head and a possible internal head injury. He was pinned beneath a crumpled seat on the left side of the bus. He was extricated by bus driver James Jackson, 25, of 315 Shreve st. Falls Church.

Taken to Arlington Hospital by the Herndon ambulance along with Thomas, were Nellie Ellis, 16, of Herndon, who suffered cuts on the left side of her face; Betty Paige, 14, of McLean, with a possible fracture of the left arm, and two youngsters who suffered only minor abrasions, Joseph Ellis, 13, and Catherine Simms, 14, both of Herndon. Two other passengers in the bus, Aline Borgus and Lewis Boston, 18, both of McLean, were uninjured.

Alert Hacker Proves Undoing of Tipsy Driver

A radio-equipped cabbie played policeman early yesterday to an effect that startled George McDaniels, 23, of Quonset Point, R. I.

S. H. Manchester, driver for Veterans Cab Association, said he saw McDanields' auto bump another in the 1300 block of E. st. ne. It continued, weaving and bumping the curb, Manchester said, as he followed, so he forced it to the curb and radioed for police.

McDaniels, according to Manchester, made fighting motions outside his cab, while he sat with doors and windows locked. Police arrived, took Manchester in custody. In Municipal Court yesterday, he was fined $100 on driving-while-drunk charge.

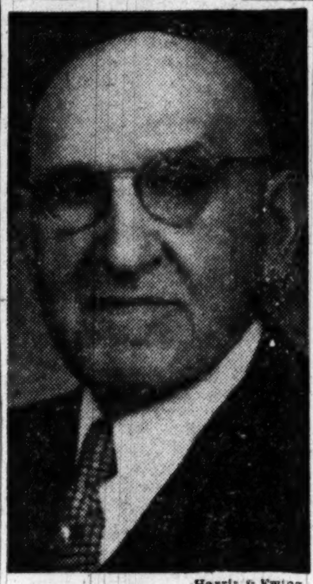
H. J. Goodman Observes His 85th Birthday



Harris & Ewing

HENRY J. GOODMAN
"I'm a little old-fashioned"

Henry J. Goodman, shirtseller to Presidents for half a century, is observing his eighty-fifth birthday today.

Goodman, whose shop is at 1707 Pennsylvania ave. nw., has done business in the same block for 51 years and has often been called "Mayor of Upper Pennsylvania ave."

He recalls marching in the inaugural parade of President Garfield in 1881 and has been selling articles of clothing to Presidents since the days of Theodore Roosevelt.

A native of Albion, N. Y., he and his brother, the late Max Goodman, came to the District in 1879. Relatives of their mother had lived in Macon, Ga., and moved to Washington at the time of the Civil War.

Max and Henry worked for 10 years for their uncle, W. Nordlinger, a prominent Georgetown clothier, and then went into business for themselves.

Yesterday Goodman said, "I'm a little old-fashioned yet. I prefer a small shop where I can handle the business myself," and referring to his prominent customers said, "what goes on here is as confifential as a physician's relationship to his patients."

Goodman works from 9 a. m. to 6 p. m. daily. He said his preference for "chocolate drops to smokes" may have something to do with his good health.

He lives with his daughter, Mrs. Milton Baum, at 2701 Connecticut ave. nw. He also has a son, Raymond.

He is a member of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants, Hiram Lodge No. 10 of the Masons, and the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Levy Is Appointed To Industrial Home School Post

Marshall H. Levy, Federal Security Agency employe, yesterday was named assistant superintendent of the Industrial Home School by the District Commissioners.

He succeeds John F. Cairns in the $4975-a-year job. Cairns was recently promoted to superintendent.

Levy, 44 has been a rehabilitation officer with the District Rehabilitation Service since 1945.

Holder of a masters degree in psychology from the University of Michigan, he is unmarried and lives at 202 Maple ave., Takoma Park.

4 to Receive Warrants in Brush Fires

County Fire Warden Blames Fairfax Blazes on Illegal Trash Burning

Warrants will be served on four persons today believed responsible for some of Wednesday's widespread brush fires in Fairfax County, a fire official said yesterday.

County Fire Warden Marcel Pfalzgraf declined to name the four men until the warrants have been served. He said they started several illegal trash fires which, fanned by a heavy wind, spread into nearby fields.

One of the warrants, Pfalzgraf said, is for a man whose trash fire may have caused a field fire that burned an extensive section near Fort Belvoir and threatened the community of Engleside before being put out. Firemen fought the fire nine hours.

Under the law, trash fires may only be started from 4 p. m. to midnight, Pfalzgraf explained. During those hours, winds are likely to be lighter in velocity, he said. Too, more volunteers are available then to fight fires. The law applies from March 1 to May 15.

The fire warden promised strict enforcement of the law. Persons convicted of violating it are subject to fines of from $10 to $100, plus all costs and damage done by the fire, he said.

Pfalzgraf urged trash burners to exercise extreme caution.

Davis Maps Anti-Crime Program

Three means of improving District crime conditions were outlined by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) last night.

The chairman of the House subcommittee investigating crime said "sound improvements" can be made from an administration standpoint; from the legislative point of view; and from a better coordination of law enforcement agencies.

From the legislative angle, he said there were many lapses in the laws, and that new laws are needed to correct some obvious deficiencies.

He recommended formation of a continuing law enforcement council to make recommendations on criminal enforcement. In this group should be representatives from the police department, the prosecuting attorney's office, the courts and the probation officer's office, he said.

The Congressman made his recommendations in an address before the Arkansas Avenue Community Citizens Association in Burdick High School, 13th and Allison sts. nw., last night.

He said he was "appalled" with the crime conditions here when he arrived, and decided to do something about them.

In a note of warning, he concluded by saying, all the work of the committee will be of no avail "if the citizens of the District don't show continual interest in law enforcement, and make sure something is done about it."

Clifford H. Nowell, president, introduced Davis.

Connecticut Ave.

The Connecticut Avenue Citizens Association last night reaffirmed its stand that private residences in its area should not be turned into apartment or rooming houses. The group met at All Souls Memorial Church, Cathedral ave. and Woodley pl. nw.

Glenn McLaughlin, the group's delegate to the Federation of Citizens Association, discussed the federation's relations to member associations. Mrs. Joseph L. Miller, second vice president, presided.

Mrs. Ottenberg Bound, Robbed Of $1300 Gems

The Washington Post

MRS. FLORENCE OTTENBERG
Was bound with neckties

Deliverymen Use Neckties to Tie Victim and Maid In Holdup of Home

Mrs. Florence Ottenberg, 38, of 3521 16th st. nw., and her maid, were held up in the Ottenberg home, tied with neckties, and she was robbed of $1300 worth of jewelry, yesterday afternoon.

Two white men, pretending to deliver a package, obtained entry to the front door, and one of them produced a gun, telling Mrs. Ottenberg: "This is a holdup."

She was ordered to the second floor, Mrs. Ottenberg told police, when her maid, Eleanor Carter, 35, of 1821 Kalorama rd. nw., appeared from the basement. The holdup men ordered the maid to accompany her.

In a rear bedroom on the second floor, Mrs. Ottenberg said, the men took a $100 wedding band, set with eight diamonds, and a three-carat diamond ring, from her finger. Then, she told police, the two tied both her and the maid to straight chairs, with her husband's neckties. They were not gagged.

Downstairs, Mrs. Ottenberg told detectives, the men took $15 from her purse, and left. The men entered at 3:30 p. m., she told police, and it was 4 p. m., before police were called. Mrs. Ottenberg said she worked one hand free from her bonds, then freed herself and the maid.

Her two children, Ray, 3, and Lee, 2, were asleep in an adjoining room.

Celebrated Anniversary

Mrs. Ottenberg is the wife of Melvin Ottenberg, head of the Ottenberg Bakery. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ottenberg, who live in the same home, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Saturday, as well as the elder Ottenberg's 73d birthday. They were not home at the time of the robbery.

Mrs. Ottenberg told detectives the men took the large square package, the one they ostensibly were to deliver, when they left. She said there was no conversation after she and the maid were tied. The men did not ransack the entire house, or ask for location of any other valuables.

The first man, who was armed, was described in a police lookout order as 30 years old, 6 feet tall, weight, 180 pounds; wearing a red and blue plaid mackinaw jacket, brown cap over his ears, and dark trousers. The second was described as about 30, 5 feet, 10 inches tall, weight 190 pounds, brown hair, wearing a blue overcoat and no hat.

Restaurateur Convicted of Tax Evasion

Baltimore, March 2 (Spl.).—A Washington area restaurant proprietor was convicted by a Federal Court jury here today of evading $96,472 in income taxes in the years 1942 to 1945, inclusive.

Highlight of his four-day trial was the appearance of his platinum blond former "confidential adviser" who testified he showered her with jewelry, a mink coat, fox furs, a Buick, and the proceeds of a rooming house she ran for him.

The defendant is Sam Wong, 30, native of Baltimore, now operator of the Quonset Inn, 3225 Naylor rd., Silver Hill, Md. Testimony showed he formerly operated the China Clipper, once in the 1000 block of 14th st. nw., Duke's Restaurant, 1334 14th st. nw., and The Dragon, 1329 G st. nw., in Washington.

The indictment charged violations while he operated the Washington restaurants.

Gift Return Spurned

The blond identified herself on the stand as being now Mrs. Mildred McCurry Hill, who lives near Asheville, N. C. She said she was unmarried when she lived in Washington and was in Wong's employ as "confidential adviser."

She testified that after she left Washington and was to be married, she offered to return Wong's gifts to him, but that he told her he had no use for them.

Another Government witness was Mrs. Marie Cool, who said she lives at 503 I st. nw., Washington, and was a bookkeeper for Wong in 1946. She testified that in the first six months she worked for him, he instructed her to set up a new set of books and gave her figures for receipts to list in them which were lower than actual receipts.

Claims a Grudge

Tesifying in his own behalf, Wong charged that Mrs. Cool has a grudge against him.

Judge W. Calvin Chesnut, before whom the guilty verdict was returned, declined today to set bond on Wong, remanded him to jail, and set March 10 for imposition of sentence.

Maximum penalty on each of the four counts on which Wong was convicted is five years imprisonment and $10,000 fine.

Tavern Owner Fined $400 for 'Slots' Operation

A $400 fine was assessed in Hyattsville police court yesterday against a 44-year-old tavern owner who admitted operation of cash-paying slot machines, four of them "one-armed bandit types."

Herman A. Crews, 35, of 5364 Quincy pl., Bladensburg, pleaded guilty to a charge of setting up a gaming table in his tavern on Defense hwy. near Landover. The charge stemmed from a visit to the tavern by two Prince Georges detectives last October 29.

Detective Wilson J. Purdy said he and Detective Vincent S. Free went into the tavern, observed five slot machines in operation and played several. They said they scored several "hits."

District Publisher Is Sued for Libel

Mrs. Ruth McCormick Miller, publisher of the Washington Times-Herald, was sued yesterday in District Court for $250,000 on a libel charge. The suit was brought by Mrs. Jean L. Langlotz, 21, of 3221 Connecticut ave. and resulted from a headline concerning her limited divorce trial here February 28.

Builders See Bad Effects In Road Law

Montgomery County builders fear the county's proposed road ordinance will transform the county from an area of spacious homesites into a "crowded city development."

Spokesmen for the recently organized Home Owners Protective Association declared yesterday that increased costs of road construction will force developers to cut house lots to minimum size if purchase prices are to be kept within the means of the average buyer. They spoke at a press conference.

The cost of constructing a road in front of a 60-foot building lot under present specifications averages $278, according to Page Hopkins, Silver Spring engineer and president of the Prince Georges-Montgomery Engineers Association.

The revised standards, together with sidewalks, planting and other added features, would raise this cost to $758, he declared.

Hopkins pointed out that the increase of $480 amounts to $8 a linear foot. In rural sections where lots are 100 feet in width, the cost per foot would amount to $8.36, he added.

In addition, Hopkins contended that in cases where any type of road improvement would be made in a section already occupied, the front foot assessment for each property owner would run in the neighborhood of $7.76 a foot.

Clarke Daniel, president of the Home Builders Association of Metropolitan Washington, asserted the present standards, set in 1946, are high enough. They are in agreement with regulations of other jurisdictions in the area, he said.

Most of the roads that have fallen into disrepair and become cause of complaint by citizens, he contended, were built before adoption of the 1946 standards.

The County Council has set March 11 at 9 a. m. for a hearing on the proposed ordinance.

Connecticut ave. businessmen asked the Commissioners yesterday whether the Dupont Circle underpass would be completed in time for an Easter parade.

They recevied no definite answer, but District highway officials said they would consult with the contractors and give a firm date early next week.

A delegation from the Connecticut Avenue Association, Inc., led by President Horace J. Meyers, told the Commissioners they must know shortly in order to make or cancel arrangements for the parade.

They indicated that unless the entire project is completed before Easter Sunday (April 9), the parade will be off. Said Alfred Pasternak, parade committee chairman: "If you want to show yourself aff at Easter, you don't want to walk through the mud and around a derrick."

Highway officials said John McShain, Inc., principal contractor, has scheduled his work for completion April 7. This does not, however, include paving the underground roadway.

Mrs. John J. Cummings Will Be Buried Today

Funeral services for Mrs. John Joseph Cummings, 68, who was a clerk in the Army's Adjutant General's Office here, will be at 10 a. m. today in St. Charles' Catholic Church, Arlington. Burial will be in Columbia Gardens Cemetery, Arlington.

Mrs. Cummings died Wednesday in Arlington Hospital after a week's illness. Her home was at 106 North Wayne st., Arlington.

She had been employed for about six years in the Adjutant General's Office and had lived in Arlington since 1938.

The former Miss Katherine Fanning, she was born in Blackstone, R. I. Her husband, an electrical engineer with the Westinghouse Electrical Manufacturing Co., died in 1932.

Survivors include three daughters, Mrs. Katherine Ladd, Mrs. Esther Price and Miss Alice Cummings, all of Arlington; a brother, Francis Fanning, of Brookline, Mass., and three grandchildren.

Truman Greets Young Scientists Meeting Here

Forty promising young scientists, here to compete in the finals of the ninth annual Science Talent Search, were greeted by President Truman yesterday.

The meeting with the President at the White House marked the opening of the five-day conclave in which scholarships, totaling $11,000, will be awarded to the outstanding boys and girls of the group.

The 40 young scientists, representing 15 States, were selected from 2245 entrants. The search was conducted by Science Clubs of America and is sponsored by the Westinghouse Educational Foundation. Scholarship winners will be announced at a banquet

Harry Lauder Buried Near Banks o' Clyde

Hamilton, Lanarkshire, Scotland, March 2 (U.P.).—Sir Harry Lauder reached "the end of the road" today under gray Scotch skies.

They buried the bandy-legged little minstrel only a mile or so from the Bonny Banks o'Clyde. But no bagpipes skirled for his last journey any more than they did for Bobbie Burns.

For Scotland, land of bleak moors, repeated tonight in its heart for Sir Harry, who died Sunday at 79, "The pale moon is setting beyond the white wave and time is setting wi' me, oh."

Dealer Gives 200 Pairs of Shoes to DPs

More than 200 pairs of women's shoes will soon be on their way to European displaced persons as a result of the efforts of a Washington shoe dealer and a Dunbarton College student.

It all started when Albert Kaplan, owner of Felser-Scott's shoe store, 901 H st. ne., had a "five-cent sale" on Washington's birthday. Anwone who bought a pair of shoes that day could get another pair for five cents.

Margherita Hunt, 19-year-old Dunbarton student, spied the advertisement.

She called Kaplan, explained that she headed Dunbarton's drive of the National Federation of Catholic College Students for relief of European DP's.

She asked Kaplan if he would sell the shoes to the students for relief use for 5 cents straight a pair.

Kaplan not only agreed to the deal, but went one better. He gave the 200 pairs of shoes to the students and agreed to pay shipping charges to New York, where the shoes will be processed by War Relief Services of the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

Yesterday, while Margherita and two of her classmates looked on, Kaplan and his assistants prepared the shoes for their shipment to New York.

Mrs. Flynn Buried Next To Husband

Killed February 24 in an auto accident at Pass-a-Grille, Fla., Mrs. Patrick T. Flynn, 44, of the Manchester Apartment Hotel, 1426 M st. nw., was buried yesterday afternoon beside her husband in Arlington Cemetery.

A native of Forest City, Mo., Mrs. Flynn and her husband came to Washington in 1944 when she joined the Bureau of Aeronautics. He was killed August 5, 1946, in a plane crash near the Patuxent River Naval Base.

Mrs. Flynn was in Florida on business when she was killed.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Hahn, Forest City; two brothers, Eugene Hahn, Kansas City, and Paul Hahn, Forest City, and four sisters, Mrs. C. D. Bergsten and Mrs. William Teany, Kansas City; Mrs. E. H. Griffin, Maize, Kans., and Miss Bernice Hahn, Marion, Kans.

Funeral Services to Be Held Today for Helen B. Chapin

Funeral services for Miss Helen B. Chapin 55, internationally known student of Far Eastern art and iconography, who died of cancer early Wednesday at Doctors Hospital, will be held at 2 p.m. today at the Friends Meeting House, 2111 Florida ave. nw. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Dr. Chapin had been in ill health since her return a year ago from Korea, where she had served for two years as an Asiatic art and monuments specialist for the Department of the Army.

She had previously spent four years in Washington as a research analyst in Chinese and Japanese for the Department of Justice.

She was the daughter of the late George Walter Chapin, a philadelphia textile merchant, and Valeria Jenkins Chapin, and was born at Wayne, four miles from Bryn Mawr, Pa.

During her girlhood she lived at St. Davids. She attended the Baldwin School and was graduated in 1914 from Bryn Mawr College, where a brief course in oriental art first awakened her interest in the Far East.

She received her master's degree from Mills College, California, in 1935, and her doctorate, for work in the field of Oriental languages and literature, from the University of California in 1940.

She was the author of many articles in learned journals, including most recently Asian Horizon, Artibus Asiae, and the Harvard Journal of Asiatic Studies.

Shortly before her death, Dr. Chapin gave her library and collection of Oriental art to Bryn Mawr College, and it has been suggested that instead of flowers contributions be sent to the college to establish a Helen B. Chapin Memorial Fund.

Dr. Chapin is survived by a sister, Mrs. Truxton Craven of New York City.

Donaldson Funeral Set For Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Grace Amelia Donaldson, 80, who died Wednesday at her home, 2107 N. Monroe st., Arlington, after a long illness, will be held today at 3 p. m. at her home. Burial will be in National Memorial Park Cemetery.

Mrs. Donaldson was the widow of Amos Donaldson, retired building contractor, who died in 1946.

A native of Baltimore, she spent most of her life in Arlington. She worked for the Treasury Department for about 15 years, before her marriage in 1900.

Mrs. Donaldson was a member of the Cherrydale Methodist Church. She served on the Arlington School Trustee Electoral Board for 25 years. She was a past president of the Cherrydale Volunteer Fire Department's Women's Auxiliary, and a member of the Eastern Star and the Daughters of America.

She is survived by a daughter, Miss Louise T. Donaldson, and a son, Edward Donaldson, both of the Monroe st. address; five sisters, Mrs. Florence Andrews of McVeytown, Pa., and Miss Jesse Topley, Mrs. Mae Livingston, Mrs. Sadie Parker, and Mrs. Annie Croson of Arlington, and a brother, William D. Topley, of Arlington. Monday night.

Dr. Bush Favored By Priest to Head New Science Body

Representative Priest (D., Tenn.) said yesterday he will urge President Truman to name Dr. Vannevar Bush as head of a new National Science Foundation now approved by both the Senate and House.

Before passing the foundation bill Wednesday, House members tied to it one of the most stringent security and loyalty checks yet to be required of any Federal agency. The bill then went to the Senate preparatory to ironing out differences between versions passed by the two chambers.

Priest, author of the House bill, told a reporter:

"Any number of members of the House would like to see Dr. Bush in the Government's top scientific spot. I intend to recommend it."

Bush, one of the Nation's foremost scientific authorities, was the wartime head of the Office of Scientific Research and Development from which emerged many of the military's most effective weapons.

Phones Go Dead For 10 Minutes In Arlington

A workman who backed into a telephone switchboard was responsible for 10 minutes of silent telephones in Arlington Wednesday, phone officials said yesterday.

Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. officials said five exchanges were "ringless" around noon when a workman, backing into a board, tore loose connections in the ringing circuit.

Phones on the Oxford, Glebe, Chestnut, Owens and Jackson exchanges were unable to ring until repairs were made, although the speaking circuits were unaffected, officials said.

Personal
To Women With Nagging Backache

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

G. W. Ousted, 65-61, by Wake Forest in 1st Round

The Washington Post Sports
4 B Friday, March 3, 1950 **

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., March 2.—The mention to Clark Griffith of the subject of holdout Eddie Stewart who is demanding more of the Washington club's money before he signs a 1950 contract, sets off a chain reaction with the 80-year-old president of the Nats.

It heats Griffith to the point where he says, as he did today, (1) Stewart isn't worth what he has already been offered, (2) the Washington Club pays better salaries than most other teams, and (3) those big salaries the other clubs brag about won't stand scrutiny.

POVICH

"The public might just as well know all about the Stewart case," said Griffith. "I'd like to be judged on what I have offered him. Last year, we paid him $12,000. He hit only .284, and didn't earn his salary.

"We started to cut Stewart's salary, but later decided we'd offer him the same money. Then we gave him a $1000 increase, and he still turned it down. He's acting like a big-shot star instead of an outfielder we saved from being turned back to the minors."

THE OLD GENTLEMAN was full of his subject. "Listen here," he said, "Stewart was just about to be turned loose from the Yankees when we bought him in 1947. They wouldn't sell us any of their other rookie outfielders, Hank Bauer or Cliff Mapes, but they let us buy Stewart.

"He had a pretty good year in 1948, but didn't come close to hitting .300. But we raised him, anyway, to $12,000. He came to us as a $5000-a-year man. With us last season he was making a lot more money than those Yankee outfielders, Bauer and Mapes, who beat him out of a job in New York. If he had stayed with the Yankees he wouldn't have done nearly as well.

"There's many a .300-hitting outfielder in the league who signed for less than the $13,000 we offered Stewart. I will only be pushed so far by a ball player. I've paid him more than he's worth for a couple of years now, and he'll have to start earning it. There won't be another nickel added to what we've offered him."

GRIFFITH CITED the case of Eddie Robinson, the first baseman he obtained from the Indians one year ago. "Cleveland and the rest of those clubs who pay Feller $80,000 or DiMaggio $100,000, never disclose what they are paying some of their other guys. Maybe they are ashamed of it. In some cases they should be.

"With us, Robinson is one of the better-paid men in the league. When we got him from Cleveland before the start of the '49 season, the Indians were paying Robby only $8500. And he was the regular first baseman on a pennant-winning team, mind you. We gave him a big raise to start with last year, and this season his Cleveland salary is almost doubled.

"That's what I mean about those big salaries. They go to a couple of stars on each team, and the rest of the players are held down to small money. The Washington club's payroll is as big as some of those first-division teams, because we have a fairer scale of pay for the little fellow."

"THE SAME SORT of thing goes on in the minor leagues as well. said Griffith. "When we bought Irving Noren from the Coast League in September, he was the property of the Brooklyn Dodgers. He was just voted the most valuable player in the Coast League, and before that he was the most valuable in the Texas League.

"But at Hollywood, the Brooklyn organization was paying Noren only $450 a month. We had to more than double that salary to give him a decent wage after we bought him. Why, we had players at Chattanooga and Charlotte whom we were paying more than those big farm chains were giving their stars in the Triple A Minors.

"Stewart ought to try to discuss salaries with some of the other clubs in our league. He'd learn what a run-of-the-mine outfielder is paid. It isn't $13,000. He'd better grab what we have offered him before I change my mind and pay him what he is entitled to."

Griff Tells Stewart to Sign or Face Fine and Ban

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—President Clark Griffith of the Nats is now confronted with a full-fledged salary holdout—Outfielder Eddie Stewart who has flatly rejected the club's latest offer with his reporting date only three days distant.

Stewart, in a letter to Griffith, emphatically demanded a higher salary than the $13,000 which the Nats' owner today described as "my final offer."

"He can stay out there in California all summer," said Griffith heatedly, "if he doesn't report by Sunday and sign his contract, he'll be fined and suspended."

Stewart, top outfielder on the team last season with a .284 batting average, has been negotiating with Griffith by mail from his Inglewood, Calif., home.

Not One of Stars

"I raised him from $12,000 to $13,000," said Griffith, "and I thought that was a generous increase for an outfielder who didn't come close to hitting .300. Stewart isn't one of the starts of the league, and better ball players than he are getting less money."

Manager Bucky Harris, viewing the salary battle from the side lines is hoping for an amicable settlement. He can ill-afford to lose Stewart after the voluntary retirement of Buddy Lewis which left the club with only six outfielders, none of them a standout.

Stewart's awareness of the club's outfielding problem is presumably playing a part in his demands for more of an increase. He was counted on as one of the regulars, and is aware of his strong bargaining position.

The Nats were back in Tinker Field today despite the wretchedness of the diamond and outfield, for their second day of spring practice. They gave up on the field adjacent the Tangerine Bowl yesterday, when there was no protection from the wind.

It's "Unusually" Cool

It was one of Orlando's "unusually" cool days, according to the chamber of commerce, and Harris had his players well bundled in windbreakers. The pitchers were loosening up, however, with Rookie Jim Pearce, 6-foot-6-inch right-hander from Charlotte, actually buzzing the ball into the catchers' mitts.

The pepper drills halted suddenly when the equipment men wheeled "Iron Mike," the mechanical pitching machine, onto the diamond. The 21 players in uniform grabbed up bats almost simultaneously to get in some licks at the fast straight balls the mechanical monster was serving up.

HERE AND THERE — George Myatt, the "holler guy," who has been hired as the Nats' third base coach in an effort to instill some ginger into the team, was loudly in evidence at today's workout . . . He was whooping it up and actually had the whole squad making noise . . . because the Nats face their first exhibition game only five days after the infielders and outfielders are due to report. Bucky Harris was of a mind to call them into camp immediately instead of waiting for Sunday . . . He gave up the idea when it appeared most of 'em were en route anyway . . . Righthanded Rookie Buzz Dozier, from Charlotte, is a ringer for ex-Nat Walter Masterson, down to his dark-colored spectacles . . . Bob McChesney, righthanded pitcher from Hardin-Simmons College is working out with the club, on trial. He may be purchased from the Abeilene, Tex., team.

N. C. State, Duke, W.-M. Win; Gain Semifinals

Durham, N. C., March 2 (AP).—Third seeded George Washington was eliminated in the first round of the Southern Conference basketball tournament by seventh-ranking Wake Forest, 65-61, here today.

In other opening round games, North Carolina State, shooting for its fourth straight championship, ousted Virginia Tech, 67-42, Duke defeated South Carolina, 53-41, and William and Mary trimmed North Carolina, 50-43.

Tomorrow's semifinals will send Wake Forest against North Carolina State and Duke against William and Mary.

South Carolina fell behind 16-3 and went almost 10 minutes without a basket in the first game.

Duke closed the first half leading, 31-20 and coasted home.

Wake Forest, a 16-point loser to George Washington last Saturday, trailed 29-24 at the end of a nip and tuck first half.

Then the Deacons opened up. Jack Mueller ignited a 12-point spree with two quick baskets and Stan Najeway added another to put Wake Forest in front 30-29. The Deacs never fell behind thereafter. At one time they led by 11 points, 60-49.

George Washington made a hair-raising finish, however, pulling up to 63-61 with 25 seconds to go. Charlie Kersh locked it up for Wake Forest with a long pass to Mueller under the basket for the clincher.

Najeway had 27 points. Art Cerra of George Washington was next best with 17.

St. John's, Tech Win to Reach Finals

By West McLean
Post Reporter

McKinley Tech eliminated defending champion George Washington, 42—41, in overtime last night at College Park and gained the finals of the Evening Star's Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament.

St. John's conquered Eastern, 32—20, in another semifinal game at the Maryland gym and meets Tech for the championship there tonight.

A pair of free throws by Snookie Kernan and another by Billy Breen in the overtime period were just enough to give Tech its second game victory.

G. W High's Smiley Moore broke through with 20 seconds left to put in a layup, but Tech protected its one-point lead by freezing the ball until the final gun.

Tech scored the first five points of the game and stayed slightly ahead of the Presidents until Bobby Kessler, 15-year-old center from G. W., put in a jump shot to tie it at 39 all. That sent the game into overtime.

Breen wound up as Tech's high scorer with 18 points. Erwin Jones had 12 for G. W.

The Eastern-St. John's curtain raiser was nip and tuck for three quarters, the lead changing hands 11 times. In the last period, however, the Cadets staged a walk-away, outscoring Eastern, 12-1.

St. John's co-captains Bob MacDonald and Bob McLindon shared scoring honors with Eastern's Ken Atchison, each having 10 points.

CCNY, LIU Win in Garden

New York, March 2 (AP).—Manhattan College scared the life out of City College of New York tonight in the second half of a Madison Square Garden Basketball doubleheader before City finally came through with a 57-55 victory. In the opener, Long Island defeated Hamline U., 63-52. Both City and LIU are hoping for bids to the National Invitation Tournament.

Brawley Sets Terps' Record

University of Maryland statisticians dipped into the record books yesterday and discovered that Lee Brawley set a new basketball scoring mark for the school this season.

Brawley, a six-foot-two sophomore from Duncan, Ariz., dropped in 120 field goals and 107 free throws for a total of 347 points. He played in 25 games.

That's 20 points better than any previous Maryland cager has been able to do in a single season. The previous high of 327 was set by Ernie Travis in 1941-42.

Bob Feller Believes He'll Win 20 Games

Put Blackwell Down for 20, Too

Tampa, Fla., March 3 (AP).—"Yea. That's me," a tall, deeply tanned, husky looking athlete replied with a grin. "I'm Ewell Blackwell. Why, do I look different?"

Different? Why, the change was almost unbelievable. Were it not for that boyish grin, that soft lazy drawl and those unusually long arms and legs, it would have been almost impossible to recognize the once frail-looking, skinny right-hander of the Cincinnati Reds.

"I feel wonderful," he added. "Better than ever before. I weigh 198 pounds stripped. That's exactly 38 pounds more than I weighed when I arrived in camp last spring."

Blackwell, whose brilliant career was almost ended by a serious kidney operation last year, predicted he'd win "a lot of ball games this season—maybe 20."

Ailing Back Good As Ever, He Says

Tucson, Ariz., March 2 (U.P.).—Bob Feller thinks he will pitch the Cleveland Indians to 20 or more victories this year.

And his famed fireball, which has been reported slowing up, is going to help him win, he said today.

"I hurt my back in San Francisco during a spring training game last year," he explained. "It caused me to lose six of my first seven starts. My back is now as good as it ever was."

Wakefield Balks

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (AP). Outfielder Dick Wakefield left the New York Yankees' camp in a huff today after being offered a contract reportedly calling for $17,500 a year.

He refused to sign and then motored back to Lakeland, 60 miles away, where he indicated he would remain until the Yankees gave him better terms. The $17,500 salary would represent the maximum 25 percent cut from the pay Wakefield received last year from the Tigers.

Chisox Businesslike

Pasadena, Calif., March 2. (AP). Manager Jack Onslow of the Chicago White Sox today launched a four-hour daily practice schedule which will continue for at least a week before he organizes two teams for intracamp games. There is a business-like attitude prevailing among the players which veterans say was not apparent on any White Sox team in recent years.

Ump Shows 'Em How

Sarasota, Fla., March 2 (AP).—American League Umpire Art Passarella donned a baseball uniform today to instruct the Boston Red Sox pitchers onthe recently revised pitching code. He demonstrated both legal and illegal mound motions.

Among the spectators were American League President Will Harridge and Nick Altrock, the 74-year-old Washington Senators' bullpen coach who has a home here. Altrock expressed disapproval of the new pitching rules.

Tigers Seek Help

Lakeland, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Detroit Tiger Manager Red Rolfe started looking today for another righthanded hitter.

"We need one if we're going to stay up in there," Rolfe declared. "I'd be willing to toss in quite a few players to make a deal for one—preferably an outfielder." He didn't say where he expected to find the latter.

Braves Work Hard, Long

Bradenton, Fla., March 2 (AP).—With National League President Ford Frick among the spectators, Manager Billy Southworth today put all of his available Boston Braves players through two-hour workouts.

Southworth divided his squad for morning and afternoon drills. The Tribesmen devoted much of their time to batting practice which Outfielder Tommy Holmes missed because of a bruised right thumb.

Campanella Has Fever

Vero Beach, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Roy Campanella, first-string Brooklyn catcher, developed a fever during the morning practice today and was excused from the afternoon drill.

Leo Counts on Hartung

Phoenix, Ariz., March 2 (AP).—Manager Leo Durocher has confidence in Clint Hartung and still plans to use him as a starting pitcher.

Part of the plan will be rooming Hartung with Coach Frank Shellenback. He hopes the association will rid Hartung of what Durocher terms a lack of confidence. Overnight rain caused a two-hour delay in today's drill.

Only 400 See Caps Down Stags, 91-88

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

What a difference a night makes. For the Caps at Uline Arena it was the difference between victory and defeat—and something like 8300 fans.

Washington squeezed by the Chicago Stags, 91-88, after blowing a 12-point lead in the last four minutes before a shivering crowd of only 400.

Wednesday night in Raleigh, N. C., 8700 saw the Stags beat the Caps, 76-75.

Little Freddie Scolari celebrated his twenty-eighth birthday by scoring exactly 28 points. Coach Bob Feerick appreciated the coincidence, particularly the last two points on foul shots that got the Caps out of a jam of their own making.

It was Chuck Gilmur, former Stag, who was runnerup with 16 points, Zaslofsky had 20 for Chicago and Andy Phillip 18.

In the preliminary, Headquarters Marines defeated Andrews Field, 66-48. Don Sullivan and Frank Gainey, each with 18 points, led the winners.

Players Wage Fight on Bonus

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (AP). Major League baseball players are quietly but efficiently launching a campaign to kill off all payments of bonuses to unproven players.

Marty Marion, National League representative to the players' committee, revealed he planned to present to the executive council at its next meeting a proposal to eliminate the payment of any kind of bonus to players.

"I have been discussing this problem with representatives of other clubs," the star shortstop of the St. Louis Cardinals said, "and we all agree that something must be done. We feel that not only do payments of large bonuses to untried players deprive the proven players of money to which they are entitled but tends to cause dissension and disharmony on a ball club.

"I personally think that the continuation of such practices will some day ruin baseball."

Marion disclosed that players on four National League clubs, including the Cardinals, have voted to eliminate the payment of bonuses of any kind to youngsters.

He said he didn't know how the American League felt about the matter but added he planned to discuss it with Fred Hutchinson of the Detroit Tigers when the two clubs meet in an exhibition game soon. Hutchinson is the American League representative.

Prof. Sawyer Tells His Story In Post Monday

An authentic college professor is managing a major league baseball club with erudition and softly spoken words for the first time in the history of the game.

The story of this new type of manager is almost as fascinating as the diverting comedy about baseball that Hollywood turned out last year entitled "It Happens Every Spring."

And who is this professorial manager?

He is Edwin Melby Sawyer, B. S., M. S., manager of the Philadelphia Phillies of the National League.

How the soft-spoken Sawyer goes about handling the Phillies will be told in a series of six articles beginning in The Washington Post next Monday, March 6.

Burke's 67 Leads Open

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (AP). Young Jack Burke took the first-round lead in the St. Petersburg Golf Open, scoring a 4-under-par 67 today.

Burke, 27-year-old White Plains, N. Y., professional, was 2 under par on each nine with 34, 33—67. He never went over par and he never had to scramble. His drives went straight and far; his putts to the pin.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N. C., came closest to him. Palmer shot 35-33—68, going over par only on the 405-yard sixth hole.

Toby Lyons, Warren, Pa., pro, shared third place with veteran George Fazio of Conshohocken, Pa., at 69.

Snead, top money man of 1949, and leader this year, was seven strokes off the pace and three over par with 74. Demaret was farther back at 76 and National Open Champion Cary Middlecoff even more so at 77.

—Outdoors Moves Indoors—

Sportsmen's Show at Armory Tonight

THE OUTDOORS WORLD, everything that is, but it's current temperatures, will be brought indoors at National Guard Armory today with the opening at 5 p. m. of the third annual All-American Sportsmen's and Outdoors Show under auspices of the League of Maryland Sportsmen.

Official opening ceremonies will be held at 8 p. m. with Glenn L. Martin, LMS president, and Lee Field, Touchdown Club prexy, acting as hosts to a special gathering of high brass. Touchdown and LMS are co-sponsoring the inaugural and splitting net gate receipts for their respective charities.

First of nightly stage and tank presentations will follow at 8:15. Besides the night shows there will be 2:30 matinees Saturdays and Sundays during the 10-day run of the big exposition. Doors will open Saturdays and Sundays at 1 p. m.

The latest in sporting equipment and apparel, boats, fishing and hunting gear, camping and travel accessories, cameras, trailercoaches, hikes and motorcycles—almost any item one could desire, will be on view

Live entertainment will feature a 95-foot high dive by Billy Outten, of Media, Pa., who does it backward for added thrills; life rescues and other difficult feats by Captain Harold Winston's educated sea lions; live duck retrieving by Chesapeakes and Labradors of the Maryland Retriever Club, and spectacular log rolling and canoe tilting by a quartet of North woods guides.

Extra color will be supplied by real Indians and Eskimos, while the fine points of shooting and fishing will be demonstrated by the "Shooting Mansfields," a team of father, mother and daughter, and a couple of pro casters, Warren Faulkner and George Albrecht. Casting will be featured every night in special programs directed by the National Capital Casting Club.

Dog lovers will also find plenty to interest them, other than in the retrieving act. Hounds of all classes will be seen in obedience tests supervised by the Capital Dog Training Club and the Maryland Beagle Club, while in a strictly solo exhibition will be seen little "Masterpiece," the $20,000 toy, grey poodle, international champion utility pooch

Included in the stage program nightly will be segments of a "Miss Outdoors, 1950" contest designed to determine the loveliest female sports participant of the metropolitan Washington area. Girls 17 to 25 are eligible, and entries are still being accepted at the Armory office

Order of Events in Outdoors Show

2:30 SATURDAY AND SUNDAY AFTERNOONS; 8:15 EVERY NIGHT

BILLY OUTTEN AND COMPANY. Bill Outten dives from 95 feet high into a 5½-foot tank of water. If he misses they look for another boy.

THE SHOOTING MANSFIELDS. Father, mother and daughter give you thrills and chills with trick pistol and rifle marksmanship.

CHIEF CRAZY BULL (GRANDSON OF CHIEF SITTING BULL). Real, live Sioux Indians who demonstrate authentic native dances and archery.

WINSTON'S SEA LIONS. A slick pack of marvels who frolic in the big tank and on stage in one of the world's finest acts.

ALASKAN ESKIMOS. Hardy athletes of the Arctic region and their astounding Huskies, in feats of the Northland.

TRAINED RETRIEVERS. Presented by Maryland Retriever Club. An amazing exhibition of animal intelligence and obedience. Live ducks, too.

MAN AGAINST HUSKIES. The Eskimo Huskies pit their strength against four North woods guides in a canoe.

NORTH WOODSMEN. Expert log rollers, canoe tilters, who present astonishing feats in the tank at constant risk of spills.

SPORTSMEN'S SHOW QUARTET. Harmonizers in special songs of hunting and fishing.

"CHICK" NOYES. One of the Nation's greatest fly and bait casters, known from coast to coast as seldom failing to score less than 99 out of 100.

"MISS OUTDOORS CONTEST." Lovely lassies of the sports world hereabouts competing for the title as prettiest female sports participant.

BROOKE JOHNS. Master of ceremonies. Metropolitan Washington's inimitable ambassador of good will, a right guy with rollicking humor.

Favored Bewitch Wins Black Helen Handicap by 7 Lengths

Bill Bennings . . .

Dear Folks: Charles Town opens tomorrow (Saturday). Here's the stewards and it's a big-league line-up: Andrew W. Winters, representing the West Virginia Racing Commission, plus Myron D. Davis of New York and John P. Turner, sr. of Baltimore. Looks like everybody and his cousin, including Art (WWDC) Brown, will be up there for the opening show. Cold or no cold, the bangtails will start banging, you can count on that. The open fireplace, plus the steam heat, will be on full force in the clubhouse and the fires will be burning in the grandstand betting ring as usual. Breathes there a man so dead who couldn't find some warmth in a 10-to-1 shot. Plenty of action. Post time for the first race is 1:30 p. m., with the daily double on the first and second races closing 15 minutes earlier. One more day to Charles Town. —Bill.

Friends Wins 9th in Row

The Friends School eighth-grade basketball team chalked up its ninth straight triumph, 37-30, over Bladensburg yesterday at Friends. Allan Mason led the victors with 14 points.

Calumet Ace Nearly Ties World Mark

Miami, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Bewitch, Calumet Farm's champion 5-year-old mare, blazed to a seven-length triumph today in Hialeah's $15,000 added Black Helen Handicap in just two-fifths of a second short of the world's record time for the mile and a furlong.

Roman Candle, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's defending champion was second and Claiborne Stable's 12 to 1 outsider Yoncalla was two lengths behind Roman Candle for third.

Spotting nine other rivals from 6 to 26 pounds in the nine-furlong test for fillies and mares, Bewitch was timed in 1:48 flat, two-fifths of a second off the world record which stablemate Coaltown equaled here last season.

It was believed the 1:48 time was a world's record for fillies and mares in a nine furlong race, but this was not immediately ascertained.

Atkinson Wins Double

Ted Atkinson, accomplished veteran, had the distinction of bagging both ends of the daily double which returned a nifty $340.30.

He won the opener atop Short Brook Farm's Off Line, an outsider at $66 which led home 13 other maiden juveniles in the 3-furlong dash. Atkinson came back in the second to score with Potato Chip Farm's Storm Ridden second choice at $8.

Baltimore Trot Meeting to Be Run At Laurel Track

Laurel Raceway, nearby harness track, will have two meetings this year, it was learned last night. In addition to its regular session scheduled to open June 22, the plant also will conduct the 20-meeting alloted to the Baltimore Raceway now being constructed on the Pulaski hwy. (Route 40) just outside the Monumental City.

The new oval is unlikely to be completed in time for the 1950 session and permission was obtained, it is reported, from Maryland legislation to shift the racing to Laurel.

Eastern JV Wins

Bill Hunter's 18 points led the Eastern High junior varsity to a 51-39 triumph over the Anacostia jayvee yesterday at Anacostia.

Redland Hunt Set Saturday

The colorful Redland Races on Saturday start at 2 o'clock on the Martin Dairy Farm, near Olney, Md. They are known as "Point-to-point" races and will be run across country, "natural hunting country" with plenty of fences and creeks to jump. The course will be about four miles long, and the horses will be visible to the spectators through most of the races.

The horses are used primarily for fox hunting and have been chasing foxes over hill and dale since early fall.

Each horse yearns to dash ahead of the group, but etiquette requires that he stay behind the master-of-foxhounds until the day of the race.

Bladensburg Ends Season With Win

Hockey May Return to Uline

Washington may have a hockey team next year with Eddie Shore the owner and Mike Uline the landlord.

Bob Foster, Uline Arena general manager, said Shore told him two weeks ago that he'd like to back an Eastern Amateur League team here in 1951.

"I told him that Sunday and Thursday night dates would be available to him," said Foster, "but he didn't say yes or no, and we didn't discuss terms. In any event, Mr. Uline would act only as landlord and have nothing to do with running the club."

Shore, former Boston Bruins hockey great, is owner of the Springfield, Mass., team in the American League, and he also has a string of farm teams.

The last Washington hockey team, owned by Uline, went out of business a year ago after suffering heavy financial losses and finishing in the American League cellar.

No Doubt—Thomas Is a Comer

20-Year-Old Knockout Artist Comes From a Fighting Family

THERE'S no doubting among the Thomases that 20-year-old Pat is the best bet for stardom in this fighting family.

The local featherweight, who won just about everything there is to win as an amateur, has had 17 pro outings and is doing well, thank you. He's scored 11 knockout, the most recent being last Monday night at Turner's Arena, and four decisions while dropping two verdicts.

Managed by his brother, Buddy, a former fighter himlsef, young Pat became a fighter strictly by accident. As a tyke of 12, he practically lived at the Prince George County Boys Club which his father, the late Walter (Rat) Thomas, managed

The Thomas boys got their fighting habits from their dad, who was a featherweight of distinction in his day. He boxed Kid Egan twice, going 20 rounds each time, and also won a newspaper decision over the famous Johnny Kilbane.

Buddy, who turned pro in 1942, the year his dad died, recalls that Pat "was all over the gym."

I USED to work out at the boys club, with dad teaching me in his spare time. Pat was 12 then, and he used to hang around and watch, sometimes punching the bag. We all began to notice that he had a beautiful style that seemed to come natural.

"Despite that, dad wouldn't encourage him to box. He felt that a man who was going to fight ought to start out strictly because he felt the urge.

"I was off in the Navy during the war, but when I got back to Washington in 1945 the kid came to me and said he wanted to fight. I sent him to the Apollo. That's where he got his amateur start, winning the Golden Gloves four times, and AAU twice and the Olympic tryouts here in 1948."

Sho'men Win As Scallion's 34 Set Mark

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—Top-seeded American University effortlessly defeated Baltimore University, 75-58, tonight in the Mason-Dixon Conference basketball tournament.

In other opening games at the Loyola gym here, Hampden-Sydney roared from behind to edge Towson Teachers, 53-49, defending champion Loyola routed Bridgewater, 63-36, and Washington College defeated Roanoke, 70-64.

Little Nick Scallion set a tournament scoring record as Washington College won. He tipped in 34 points tonight to top the previous record of 31 set last year by Loyola's Jim Lacy.

He sat on the bench for seven minutes near the end of the game because he had four fouls on him.

In tomorrow night's semifinals, Hampden-Sydney plays Loyola and A. U. tackles Washington College.

Baltimore U., which barely made the playoffs by beating Catholic University in a post-season contest to break an eighth-place tie, couldn't penetrate American's smooth zone defense.

The Washington lads started pulling away after five minutes of play when the score stood at 8-8 and were never headed. American led at halftime, 39-23.

Ronnie Garshag was the big gun for American. His deadly pivot shots accounted for 10 field goals. He also tossed in a free throw for a 21-point total.

DeMatha Clouts Chamberlain, 65-40

DeMatha High of Hyattsville romped to a 65-40 triumph over Chamberlain yesterday at the Hyattsville Armory. It was the final game for the victors and gave them a record of 15 wins and 10 defeats.

Terry DeVaney, with 20 points, and Frank Fuqua, with 19, paced DeMatha.

Wismer Tees Off On Gibbons, 12 Up

This is something you'll never hear about on the radio.

Jim Gibbons and Harry Wismer, radio guys on Washington Redskins pro football games, have opened their 1950 golf series . . . a series that extends back over the years with no shots wasted.

At the end of nine holes, Wismer was 7 up; at the end of 18 holes, he was 12 up. Wismer shot an 80 in a treacherous wind. Gibbons "broke a hundred."

Playing at the Columbia Country Club, they were in good company with Maurice McCarthy shooting 76, Bob Thompson 79 and John Daniels 85.

Walter Hagen once beat Bobby Jones by 12 and 11.

Ram Leads Punt Returns

Verda T. (Vitamin) Smith, Los Angeles Rams' rookie, led the way in punt returns in the National Football League, according to the league office yesterday.

The Abilene, Tex., sprinter ran back 27 punts for an average return of 15.8 yards, including an 85-yard touchdown sprint.

Runner-up was John Cochran, Chicago Cards' speedster who was the only man to return two for scores.

Bill Dudley, Detroit, and Washington's Dan Sandifer, recently involved in a straight trade, were seventh and eighth. The Redskins' Eddie Saenz was twelfth.

Priory Games Open Tonight

Three of the area's top schoolboy basketball scorers are the big attractions as Priory's annual invitational tournament begins this afternoon at Priory's gym.

The three big pointmakers are Dave Kline of Charlotte Hall Military Academy, Roger Kingsbury of Albans and Frank Fuqua of DeMatha.

All three are excellent college prospects, standing over 6 feet 4 inches tall. Kline has a 26-point average, Kingsbury has averaged 24.5 and Fuqua 20.

First round pairings send Priory against Friends at 5:30, Charlotte Hall against Chamberlain at 7, St. Albans against St. Paul's at 8:30, and St. Anthony's against DeMatha at 10.

Winners of the first two games and winners of the second two will meet in the semifinals Saturday night with the finals set for Sunday afternoon.

Walcott Fights Tonight in Garden

New York, March 2 (AP).—Jersey Joe Walcott, still a heavyweight contender in his twenty-first year in the ring, returns to the scene of his greatest glory tomorrow night when he faces wild-swinging Omelio Agramonte of Cuba, in the main 10-rounder at Madison Square Garden.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

STATLER Embassy Room patrons can thank the White House news photographers association dinner of last weekend for their entertainment. Marge and Gower Champion, well known dance team, came to town just after finishing a picture in Hollywood to appear at the annual affair. While there, they're filling a one week engagement in the Embassy Room.

The Champion brand of dancing is so well developed and executed that it seems to have a different approach altogether. Their music, scored especially for the routines, adds to the impression of something above par.

Billboard puts it this way: "Under the spell of the Champions, the dance takes on a third dimensional quality and becomes a living, vibrant entity glowing with laughter and love. Their choreography is fresh, light and brilliantly conceived, with an eye ever open to the humorous side of life."

It's a good weekend entertainment bet! Floor shows begin at 8:45 and 11:30. Al Donahue supplies the music.

NIGHT club habitues will recognize the Tong Brothers, Chinese acrobats at the Shoreham Blue Room. They're still up to the same routine, but it's worth watching another time. They balance themselves in innumerable ways, with the help of the acrobats' table. Their best act, judging from the gasps of the crowd, is the rotating of two handstanding Tong brothers supported by the third.

The Sylvia Manon Trio also specializes in a gasping audience. In this act, guests become tense, can feel Sylvia flying through the air between the two men. They are just about at ringside to pick up the pieces if she falls.

Reaction is not due to any unsureness of the trio, but simply the law of gravity. Two huge men toss Sylvia, who is a scant five feet, between them, throw her into a few double twists and somersaults. They seem to be pleasantly charmed by tiny Sylvia, but the onlookers are biting their teeth.

Third act in the Blue Room is singer Camille Baker.

Bach Named Bonnie Coach

Olean, N. Y., March 2 (AP).—Losing its head football coach, 22 lettermen and plenty of money isn't going to stop tiny St. Bonaventure.

The Indians made that clear today when they announced the signing of another Notre Dame product to replace head coach Hugh Devore.

The new coach is Joe Bach, one of the famed "seven mules" as a tackle at Notre Dame in 1923 and 1924.

He comes here from his job as line coach of the New York Bulldogs of the National-American Football League.

The Bonnies had looked to Devore to lift them into "big time" football when he came here from Notre Dame in 1946.

Mt. Vernon Ousts Falls Church, 46-38

Chip Porter's 18 points weren't enough and Falls Church dropped a 46-38 decision to Mount Vernon in the semifinals of the Fairfax County High School basketball tournament yesterday at Fairfax.

In the second game, Fairfax romped to a 60-27 win over Herndon. The two victors play Saturday night at eight o'clock at Fairfax for the County tournament championship.

Coal Shortage Forces Shift In Court Game

The coal shortage made its effect felt in local sports circles yesterday.

The semifinal game the Montgomery County Basketball League was shifted from Takoma Junior High to Catholic University's gym. This game is scheduled for Sunday at 8 p. m. and brings together Colesville and Silver Spring Elks.

Sunday's winner will play Tom's Auto in a two-out-of-three series, beginning March 18 at Uline Arena.

'Iolanthe' at Lisner Proves Lots of Fun

By Paul Hume

Real scenery, lights, costumes, music, and a perfect stage are so rare in Washington that it's hard to know how to take them at first.

It is all on display this week at Lisner Auditorium where they're doing "Iolanthe." Gilbert wrote words for lots of these things years ago, but as in the Mikado, Pinafore, and the others, his lines now carry casual references to "Commnists, leftists, psychiatrists, and Churchill."

Who's doing the G & S? Why the same people who did it last year on the same premises: the Army Air Force Orchestra, their Singing Sergeants, and the Girls' Glee Club from George Washington University.

Sullivan (he wrote music for the team) comes out unchanged. Solos, choruses, and the patter rythms are all there. There is some real flair for the distinctive style needed for Gilbert and Sullivan among the performers assembled at Lisner.

Ivan Genuchi stars as the aging, but still willing Lord Chancellor. He acts as well as he sings, and mimes better than anyone else in the show. Judith Callendar sounds and looks dreamy as young Phyllis.

Betty Scott, Ramona Rhoades, and Harold Copenhaver serve as a good Queen, Iolanthe, and Strephon. Miss Scott sang over one of February's meaner colds. Kenneth Grafton was a model in physique and voice for the private in the Grenadier Guards.

It's all good fun. A helping hand would have eliminated most of the meaningless walking around the stage; a lieutenant should tell the Singing Sergeants to wipe off the self-conscious grins that spoiled their entrance. Lights ought to stay steady for more than a minute at a time and the orchestra lacks decisive leadership.

Amateur sights and sounds such as these in so promising a production are out of keeping with the many professional touches.

One on the Aisle—

Babs Runs Gamut Of Heel to Halo

By Richard L. Coe

ONE OF THE busiest Hollywood specialties, surely, is thinking up new troubles for such ladies as Barbara Stanwyck, Bette Davis and Joan Crawford.

Barbara is the subject of the Warner's new essay, "Thelma Jordon." This one does not sink into quite all the depravities of Bette's "Beyond the Forest," nor into exactly the same bogs as Joan's "Flamingo Road." The pitch of this Ketti Frings screen play (from a story by Mary Holland) is to keep you guessing. Was Barbara a total heel or will True Love make of her something better?

The picture wildly vacillates between both poles, going in great, slow-paced sweeps from one conclusion to the other. One moment you're convinced that at heart she's good, good, good, and if you're not so distracted as Victim Wendell Corey, that's only because you keep pinching yourself and yammering to your Id that, after all, this is only a movie.

Whatever Barbara's Thelma is or isn't, she's certainly a homebreaker. She's gone to a small town to look after old, quivery, emerald-chocked Aunt Vera. To Assistant District Attorney Corey she portrays herself as a lady-like companion of ancient ladies in smart places and, oh, so tired of it all.

"THELMA JORDON." Paramount release produced by Hal Wallis. Screen play by Ketti Frings, from a story by Marty Holland. Photographed by George Barnes. Music by Victor Young. Directed by Robert Siodmak. At the Warner.

THE CAST

Thelma Jordon	Barbara Stanwyck
Cleve Marshall	Wendell Corey
Miles Scott	Paul Kelly
Pamela Marshall	Joan Tetzel
Kingsley Willis	Stanley Ridges
Tony Laredo	Richard Rober
Judge Blackwell	Minor Watson
District Attorney Pierce	Barry Kelley
Dolly	Laura Elliot
Judge Hancock	Basil Ruysdael
Mrs. Blackwell	Jane Novak
Aunt Vera	Gertrude W. Hoffman
Sidney	Harry Antrim
Clara	Kate Lawson
Esther	Theresa Harris
McCary	Byron Barr
Matron	Geraldine Wall
Timmy Marshall	Jonathan Corey
Joan Marshall	Robin Corey

Corey's home life is pretty deadly because his child-like wife thinks her papa is more important than her husband, which leads hubby to pick up the roving Thelma in the D.A.'s office one night while she's asking protection for auntie's jewels. Between the troubled husband and the lady companion a Great Love Dawns, at least in Corey's eyes.

Soooo, when someone shoots auntie and steals her jewels, Corey, for some reason, tries to cover up for Barbara. Then it turns out that auntie has altered her will so that Barbara gets everything. The D. A. arrests Barbara for murder.

And who do you think prosecutes Barbara and doesn't ask her entangling questions about a mysterious stranger she'd been seen with? Yup. Corey suffers, but Barbara gets her acquittal, at which time it's clear she'd planned the whole dastardly business that way and off she goes with her "husband" to squander auntie's dough.

'Time' Surveys Half-Century

This being a movie, things can't end like that and they don't. Retribution sets in via sudden death and Corey staggers off into the murk to face heaven knows what ghastly adventures. The atmosphere is such that a well-integrated moviegoer assumes that around the corner stalks Bette Davis.

This troubled, unlikely adventure is plushly performed with Joan Tetzel as the whining wife and Paul Kelly in a friendly, if unimportant, role as the D. A.'s office pal. Why don't they give Kelly a good movie role?

Robert Siodmak's direction is probably as good as the screen play can expect, and while it's a world I know not and much doubt exists, the plight of all concerned struck me as nearly laughable. But not quite.

Also on the Warner screen is the March of Time's half-century summary, "Mid-Century Halfway to Where." This covers everything that provokes modern headaches, including modern art, science and bombs. It's good March-of-Time-like thunder and sunshine and I hope the second edition uses the same technique for the year 2000.

CONFUSED? . . . About what seems to be the sudden plethora of live theaters coming our way? . . . Add to the confusion the Gayety Theater's denial of reports from New York that Harald Bromley and Eunice Healey would take over the house for 10 weeks . . . The Gayety management now denies this and says it has its own plans for the theater's future bills, first of which will be announced Monday night at Susan Peter's "Barretts of Wimpole Street" opening . . . This seems to mean that Judy Holliday will NOT be appearing there, after all, in "Born Yesterday" . . . Me, I'm all for letting things simmer a while, but I can assure you that the Strand-ANTA deal is the best thing that's hit our city since the last opening night of "Oklahoma!"

GLEN ECHO won't be the same . . . Leonard Schloss, vice president and general manager for 39 years, is retiring because of ill health . . . Capital Transit's amusement park has been Len Schloss' life, and a good, enviable life it's been . . . He'll be succeeded by Gerald P. Price, 40-year-old branch manager of United Artists, once with Warners and always a good Variety Clubber.

"CINEMA 16" goes on tonight and tomorrow at the Institute of Contemporary Arts, 1322 New York ave., at 8:40 . . . The program: "Horror Dances," by Sidney Peterson; "Glen Falls Sequence," by Douglas Crockwell; "Le Bijou," by Francis Lee; and "The Potted Psalm," "a surrealist psychological film."

TONIGHT brings the opening of the Foundry Players' production of "The Young and Fair" in the dramatic hall of the Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw. . . . In the cast are Jane Plummer Rice, "Mike" McLarren, Marjorie Coble, Sandra Stahl, Lois Copenhaver and Rosalie Iadarola . . . Marion Beasley has directed . . . The play will be repeated tomorrow night at 8:30.

Fourth Soldier Dies; Crash Toll Raised to Six

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—Pvt. Joseph Trimble of Lancaster, Pa., died today, raising to six the number killed in a head-on collision on the Washington blvd. early last Tuesday.

Three other soldiers at Fort Meade, Md., and two Baltimore cab drivers died earlier.

State police had wheeled around to chase an 80-mile-an-hour car zipping down the four-lane highway when they heard a crash. Minutes later they saw that the speeding car had collided with a cab at the south end of the Patapsco River bridge, about six miles southwest of Baltimore.

All occupants of both cars were either dead or fatally injured.

Jane's 'Nancy Goes to Rio' Treats Two Durable Themes

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

SOME genius having decided that it's time to have Jane Powell in the situation where everybody thinks she's going to have a baby, we are blessed with a movie called "Nancy Goes to Rio," now at the Capitol Theater, and there she is in the situation.

She's also in the situation where Daughter has a chance to do Actress-Mother out of a part in a great play. This was done some years ago by Donald Cook and Donald O'Connor with every bit the success accorded it in "Nancy Goes to Rio."

I'm going to spare you details of this travesty. Feel free, however, to slip up to the Capitol and check them over for yourself. Lots of young people, up there for the show I caught, had a swell time.

Ann Plays Mother

Ann Sothern plays Jane's mother. She's a lovely thing, though I don't think Technicolor does all it should for her. Barry Sullivan is the love interest and I don't think Technicolor or anythnig else could help him. Louis Calhern, as a grandfather and former actor, is highly entertaining. He, Miss Sothern and Jane do a short turn with "Shine On, Harvest Moon" which is very crisp. Glenn Anders of the New York stage plays a theatrical director so convincingly that he almost seems out of place. Carmen Miranda, the lady in the tutti-fruitti hat, also is around. I keep wishing they'd permit Carmen to really let herself go in one of those movies. She has two numbers in this one for the benefit of Mirandaphiles.

This has all been brought to a high gloss and is very bouncey and sing-songy. Strictly for the teen-age patrol, of course.

Mario and Floria on Stage

Dancers Mario and Floria top the stage show at the Capitol.

THE CAST

Frances Elliott	Ann Sothern
Nancy Barklay	Jane Powell
Paul Berten	Barry Sullivan
Marina Rodrigues	Carmen Miranda
Gregory Elliott	Louis Calhern
Scotty Sheldan	Scotty Beckett
Ricardo Domingos	Fortunio Bonanova
Arthur Barrett	Glenn Anders

They're their smooth, gracious, shiny, professional selves, as always. Clifford Guest, the Australian ventriloquist, has an amusing act, as do the Stagg McMann trio, a harmonica team. Singers Wyman and White offer several bright songs.

Kay DeWitt, in a stunning red dress, sings "I Said My Pyjamas and Put on My Prayers." Both the song and the dress appear to have been built for her. Sam Jack Kaufman and his band are in the pit, everybody finishing together and seeming very proud about it.

Navy Band to Mark 25th Anniversary

The United States Navy band will celebrate its twenty-fifth birthday Saturday—25 years, says the Navy group of serving as "a living symbol of the romance of the seas."

The band will have a special anniversary program 1 to 1:30 p. m. Saturday on its regular "Navy Hour" broadcast over WMAL.

Main feature will be the appearance of Edwin Franko Goldman, dean of American bandmasters, as a guest conductor. The band's regular director is Lieut. Comdr. Charles Brendler.

Now 90-men strong, the band was formally created by President Coolidge on March 4, 1925, the day of his inauguration as President. He signed an Act of Congress making it the official band of the Navy.

Music in the Navy, however, seems to go as far back as 1826, when a seaman aboard the Frigate Constellation was promoted to "master of the band."

The first recognized band in the Navy was organized in 1838, with a total of six men. By World War I, Navy records show, it was a full-scale and first-class group.

Commander Brendler, band conductor since 1941 and a band member throughout its quarter-century of official existence, said the band is the second oldest in the armed services.

The Marine Band was organized first, he said, the Navy Band second, with the Army third and the Air Force group a rank youngster.

Rubber Plant Disposal Plan Turned Down

By The Associated Press

A House Armed Services subcommittee rejected President Truman's plan for disposing of the Government's wartime rubber plants yesterday and, instead, recommended a three-year extension of the present law.

If Congress accepts the subcommittee's recommendation, the Government will retain about 90 per cent of the synthetic rubber plants it built during the war, when his country was cut off from normal natural rubber sources.

Some are on a standby status, while others are being operated for the Government by private firms. The present law is scheduled to expire June 30.

Mr. Truman has asked for Congressional authority to sell the plants if he saw fit, under conditions which would give the Government first call on their output in any emergency. Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), said such action would be an unwarranted security risk in light of present unsettled world conditions.

Wiley Wants U. S. to Deport Frank Costello

By The Associated Press

Senator Wiley (R., Wis.) demanded yesterday that the Department of Justice take action to revoke the citizenship of Frank Costello, whom the Senator described as an underworld kingpin.

He said that if such action is successful "then I, for one, will insist that he be promptly deported."

Wiley made the demand in urging Senate approval of a resolution by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) calling for a $100,000 investigation into organized crime. The resolution has been approved by the Judiciary Committee.

Wiley said deportation of Costello would not solve the Nation's crime and gambling problem. But he continued:

"It would make unmistakably clear to every hoodlum, every mobster as well as to millionaire crooks in their penthouses and sitting smugly behind the barrier of legal experts—it would make it unmistakably clear to them that crime does not pay."

Wiley said Costello, a native of Italy, was granted citizenship in 1925—and that he has testified he engaged in bootlegging from 1919 to 1932.

"How could Costello, who petitioned for citizenship on May 11, 1925, and who later admitted smuggling whisky during the entire period, be of 'good moral character,' 'attached to the principles of the Constitution' and "well disposed to the good order and happiness' of our country?" Wiley asked.

He said an alien must meet those requirements to become a citizen.

Nehru to Visit Riot Area

New Delhi, India, March 2 (AP).—Prime Minister Nehru announced to Parliament today he will visit Bengal in a few days to investigate a critical situation brought on by bloody communal rioting and mass migrations of terror-stricken people.

Apartment Ouster Upheld In Arlington

Arlington County Court Judge Hugh Reid yesterday ruled in favor of a member of the Dunbar Mutual Homes Association, who asked that the curent occupant, Jack Clark, be ousted from an apartment in the Dunbar project.

Plaintiff in the case was Robert McGregor of 1839 4th st. nw., one of 21 persons who have filed court suits for possession of apartments in the 86-unit project. The remainder of the suits must still be heard.

McGregor contended he was entitle to move into 3519 S. Kemper dr., Arlington, as a member of the cooperative, which took title to the Dunbar units from the Federal Government in October, 1949.

He and 20 other persons asking court support of their right to move into the project, are represented by Attorney P. H. Harris. The 21 defendants, who have objected to eviction on technical grounds, are represented by James A. Raby.

Howard U. Honors Three Of Graduates

Three graduates of Howard University yesterday received alumni awards for distinguished achievement during ceremonies marking the eighty-third anniversary of the foundingof the school.

Dr. W. Roderick Brown, Pittsburgh, Pa., specialist in the treatment of tuberculosis, received the award in medicine; Oliver W. Hill, Richmond, Va., lawyer specializing in civil liberties cases in law, and Jesse H. Mitchell, founder of the Industrial Bank of Washington, in business.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of the school, delivered the founders' day address when Miss Lillian E. Smith, author of "Strange Fruit," was unable to appear because of illness.

'Mr. Jones, Meet the Master'

'Lo, I Am With You Always, Even Unto the End of the World'

FOREWORD

There are no other sermons like Peter Marshall's. For there was no other man like Peter Marshall.

The beloved Chaplain of the United States Senate, Peter Marshall passed away recently at the age of 46. He had attained a national reputation at an age when most clergymen are still unknown.

The Washington Post during the early Lenten season is publishing the richest passages from Peter Marshall's most vigorous sermons. They were preached in Washington's historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. They were addressed to the man he called "Mr. Jones," to the multitude of clerks and taxi drivers, butchers and housewives, motormen and the lonely girl in the hospital ward.

Taken from the book, "Mr. Jones, Meet the Master," the sermons preserve the emphasis of his words, by a special typographical style. The manuscripts are presented exactly as Peter Marshall prepared them.

By Peter Marshall

THE GRAVE IN THE GARDEN

The facts concerning Jesus of Nazareth are, according to the Church, that He lived.
He died
and He arose from the dead.
Can the Church justify such a contention?
He lived, as no intelligent student can deny.
He died. That fact nobody need deny.
He died quivering on a cross, after about six hours of agony and suffering.
To make sure of His death, one of the soldiers pierced His side with a spear, and the last remaining drops of His blood were poured out to prove that His love was stronger than death.

Then came Sunday morning.
The first rays of the early morning sun cast a great light that caused the dew drops on the flowers to sparkle like diamonds.
The atmosphere of the garden was changed . . .
It was the same garden . . . yet strangely different.
The heaviness of despair was gone, and there was a new note in the singing of the birds.
Suddenly, at a certain hour between sunset and dawn, in that new tomb which had belonged to Joseph of Arimathea, there was a strange stirring, a fluttering of unseen forces . . .
a whirring of angel wings
the rustle as of the breath of God moving through the garden.
Strong, immeasurable forces poured life back into the dead body they had laid upon the cold stone slab; and the dead man rose up came out of the grave clothes walked to the threshold of the tomb, stood swaying for a moment on His wounded feet, and walked out into the moonlit garden.
Then came a group of women as soon as they could, bringing spices and materials with which to complete the hasty anointing of their Lord.
They came with all the materials with which to anoint a dead body, and when they came to the grave in the garden, they found that the stone had been rolled away from the door of it, and the grave was empty.
Here is John's account of what followed:
"But Mary stood without at the sepulchre weeping: and as she wept, she stooped down, and looked into the sepulchre,
And seeth two angels in white sitting, the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus had lain.
And they say unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him.
"And when she had thus said, she turned herself back, and saw Jesus standing, and knew not that it was Jesus.
Jesus saith unto her, Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the gardener, saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away.
Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master."
Christ had spoken her name, and all of heaven was in it.
She uttered only one word, and all of earth was in it.
If we believe this, it is one of the loveliest stories in literature.
It is a story over which, without shame, men might weep.
It is a story which we cannot read without feeling a lump in our throats.
If we do not believe it, it is a clever and shameful lie!
Does it sound like a lie to you?
Does it have a hollow ring of uncertainty or falsehood?
Do you not rather get the feel of truth in it?

Is it all a trick? Are we all deluded fools?
No, we are not deluded—
No fact in history is better established, more scientifically established, than this one.
The disciples did not expect this to happen!
Their belief in the Resurrection was not some fantastic idea that had been wafted in from the swamps of their fevered imaginations.
It was not some romantic wish out of their dream-house, not the result of wishful thinking.
for it came as a complete shock unexpected bewildering.
When Mary Magdalene and Joanna and Mary, the mother of James, and other women came breathlessly from the empty tomb, shaking with an extraordinary excitement and blurting out the news to the disciples, we are told:
"and their words seemed to them as idle tales, and they believed them not."

Read Luke, or the story of Thomas, the dogged unbeliever, as John tells it,
"except I shall see in His hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the prints of the nails, and thrust my hand into His side, I will not believe."
That was no wishful thinking, was it?
Eight days passed by. The disciples were gathered together. This time Thomas was there. Suddenly Jesus was with them in the room, and He said to Thomas:
"Reach hither thy finger, and behold My hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into My side: and be not faithless, but believing."
And Thomas answered and said unto Him, "My Lord and my God."
Now, if one man says he has seen a dead person alive, you may believe him or not, according to your opinion of his trustworthiness.
If ten men tell you that they have, at the same time, seen this dead person alive, talking walking in newness of life, you begin to be impressed.
If five hundred men tell you that they have seen Someone who was dead . . .
well, you must admit that you are in a startling minority.
The Resurrection of Christ was regarded by the disciples as something which is as indisputable historically as the death of President Wilson.

Is it true?
Is Christ really risen from the dead?
As that question begins to knock—gently—on your heart's door, you realize that you have gone back through the centuries to when the world was nineteen hundred years younger, back to the country of the camel, and sandaled footprints in the sands of Palestine . . .
back to the time of the Roman eagle fluttering over bronze breastplates shining in the Syrian sun back to the days of the Caesars.
And you feel quite funny—almost ridiculous—for you have your microscope in your hand your measuring tape your litmus paper
your biology textbook your test tube
and your college diploma.
In the half-shadow in the womb of time your microscope glitters like a diamond.
Your tape measure gleams like a line of gold.
Your litmus paper is a purple ribbon from a royal standard.
Your test tube, a silver bugle to sound a note of triumph,
And the noise and confusion of unbelief has died away.
And in the quiet Easter morning you are standing in front of a grave in a garden, and you see a stone in the doorway, but the stone is moving . . . is moving!
And before you are aware of it, you will realize suddenly that Someone is standing beside you, and your eyes are fixed on His and, and see a mark in the palm of it, like the prince of a nail.
And as a great realization dawns over you, you hear His voice:
"Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."
"Whosoever beliveth in Me, though he was dead, yet shall he live and whosoever liveth and believeth in me, shall never die . . ."
"Because I live, ye shall live also."
It is so tremendous a thing that we can't describe it. It is so delicate a thing that we can't even bring it into view for anybody else to look at. We can never explain it to anybody else.
We only know that it is true.
The Voice has said: "Because I live, ye shall live also."
If a man die, shall he live again?" Yes, because the Resurrection is a fact. Aye, and I, too, shall live, because I know it's true.

The Gallup Poll

Women's Vote Major Factor In Britain's Swing to Right

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., March 2.—Britain's Conservative Party owes a large part of its remarkable comeback in the recent election to Mrs. John Bull. The shift of women against the Labor government nearly put the Conservatives back into power and had a great deal to do with cutting Labor's margin from 146 seats in 1945 down to seven.

In the election five years ago the Labor Party led with both men and women. This time the men continued to favor Labor, but the women picked the Conservatives, although by a small margin.

This analysis of the vote by sexes comes from the surveys of the British Institute of Public Opinion.

Its final survey showed the following division of the vote by sexes:

	Men	Women
Labor	46.5%	43.5%
Conservative	42	45
Liberal	10	11
Other	1.5	.5
	100%	100%

In comparison with American elections, it is unusual to find men and women on different sides of the political fence. Here the political sentiments of women tend to follow closely those of the men.

The British housewife was less interested in "isms" and ideology than in practical, everyday problems such as food rationing, prices, housing and employment. The shift of the women's vote away from Labor is a reflection of dissatisfaction with government handling of these problems. Dissatisfaction with the housing situation is especially high, the British institute reports.

As early as July, 1949, the British polling organization was showing a shift of political sentiment toward the Conservatives. In a dispatch from London dated July 14, 1949, Dr. Henry Durant, director of the British institute, reported:

"A shift of political sentiment toward the right, away from the Labor party and toward the Conservatives is taking place in England . . .

"It is becoming increasingly clear that the Labor government is judged by the public on the same basis as all other governments are judged. The question is not one of ideology, not whether the party in power is Socialistic. The question the public asks itself about the Labor government is, 'Does it seem to be delivering the goods?' "

Trend studies made by the British institute since the 1945 election show that when the Labor government seemed to have the economic situation well in hand they gained support. They lost ground during the various food, fuel and dollar crises which have beset England in the aftermath of the war.

Here is the British election record:

FEBRUARY 23 ELECTION

	Poll Forecast	Result
Labor	45 %	46.1%
Conservative	43.5	43.3
Liberals	10.5	9.2

Cumberland Post Refused by Luckman

Cumberland, Md., March 2 (AP). Charles Luckman, New York business executive and former head of the President's Citizen's Food Committee, has declined an offer to become consultant to the Cumberland Industrial Promotion Co., Inc.

Howard M. Smith, chairman of the promotion group appointed by the mayor and council to bring industry to Cumberland, said Luckman's reply to the telegraphed offer of last Saturday stated, "Right now my position is such that I cannot take advantage of this opportunity."

If You Will Love Me

If you will listen to my plea. . . . And if your heart will say . . . That you will love and cherish me . . . For ever and a day . . . There is not anything on earth . . . I will not gladly do . . . To live a life of greater worth . . . And give it all to you . . . Because, dear one, you mean so much . . . That when I hold your hand . . . The comfort of your gentle touch . . . Is like a soft command . . . It is the urge to better things . . . And to a nobler goal . . . With all the joy that beauty brings . . . To elevate the soul . . . And in that hope I look above . . . And put the past away . . . That I may live a life of love . . . For ever and a day.

Unique School Ready for Dedication

MISS AUGUSTA H. CLAWSON, director of the Harrison School, stands beside a painting of Hannah Harrison, Julius Garfinckel's mother, for whom the school was named

Industrial Arts Center Is Garfinckel Memorial

By Bill Brinkley

A REMARKABLE school will be dedicated here Sunday. It's the Hannah Harrison School of Industrial Arts, 4470 MacArthur blvd. nw. Classes will start April 1, the climax of over 13 years of planning and work.

The school is Julius Garfinckel's memorial to his mother and is named for her. It was provided for in the will the store magnate left when he died in 1936.

The story is that Mr. Garfinckel was greatly impressed over the years with the number of untrained women who came in looking for jobs—widows and others thrown suddenly on their own—who didn't know the first thing about making a living.

So he provided for "a school and home in which worthy women dependent upon their own efforts for their livelihood may obtain proper training in useful arts and industries, and, at the same time, while fitting themselves for such vocations, may have the comforts of a good home, healthful meals and requisite medical attention."

The YWCA was selected to carry this program out. There's a three-million-dollar trust fund. The building with equipment has cost about $700,000.

No School Like It

Miss Augusta H. Clawson, the director, who has a wide background in vocational training, says there's no school quite like this one anywhere in the country.

Miss Clawson, by the way, is a rather remarkable woman herself. As special agent of the United States Office of Education, War Production Training for Women, she took warplant jobs as a riveter, welder, sheet-metal worker, to see how women could do these jobs and wrote a book, "Shipyard Diary of a Woman Welder."

The school's physical plant, as exhibited this week, is a very slick proposition. It will give the girls single rooms, ultra-modern furniture, a decor of chartreuse, grey, blue, a special hair-washing room, infirmary, large living room-library and a basement recreation room with a small kitchen for parties. Classrooms are equipped to the last word.

Expenses Paid

The girls' only expenses will be their clothes. Everything else—training, board, lodging, are paid for.

The school will make its methods as it proceeds, says Miss Clawson. It may have something of a college atmosphere. There will be some sort of curfew, since the girls will have a full day. There may be a student council.

"Students will participate in the routine of household keeping," said Miss Clawson. "We don't want this to be a dole."

Somehow at first the word got around it would be a "school for elderly women."

Not at all, said Miss Clawson. While there's no age limit, average is expected to be between 20 and 30. Age 16 is minimum.

Three Subjects

At first there'll be training in three subjects: Executive housekeeping (supervisory jobs in hotels, hospitals, etc.), foods (such as restaurant management), and secretarial.

Later, subjects like commercial art, clothes designing, advertising and photography may be added. The girl will stay until she learns her job—up to a year.

So far there are 95 applicants for the first 30 available openings. The school can accomodate 50. Applicants include "several with college degrees" and a woman with three children who can place them temporarily with her mother.

The dedication Sunday is at 4 p. m. tonight there'll be a dinner for the Hannah Harrison School Committee. Tuesday night is "Garfinckel Night," when employes who knew Julius Garfinckel will visit the school. March 9 a luncheon for educators is scheduled.

The Washington Post

Mary Haworth's Mail

Working Wife, 50, Plans With Spouse to Build And Furnish New Home, But Her Grandchildren's Destructive Play on Visits Is a Source of Worry

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I are both 50 years of age and have raised three children. Of course, like most everyone our age we went through the big depression while the children were small, so it was no easy task—but anyway, we made it.

Then after all the children were grown, I at the age of 43 went to work in a department store, and I am still employed. In the meantime, my husband has acquired a better job and now we have enough money saved to buy a car, a house and new furnishings.

However, the problem is my grandchildren. One son has four children, the other has three, and when they visit us you should see my home. It looks like a cyclone had struck, and the children have broken many articles that I wouldn't have parted with for the world.

After Last Visit She Had Hysterics

THE CLIMAX came yesterday when they finally broke a keepsake I treasured that belonged to my daughter, who died when she was 20. Also they knocked a lamp off a table, stripped the table of its scarf and other bric-a-brac, then went from there to my coffee table and dismantled that. They took off the glass top and were playing with the doily, veiling their faces, and all the while my son and his wife sat watching them, grinning foolishly.

After they went home I went to bed in hysterics and my poor husband tried to clean up the mess. Now I love my children, but I am carrying two jobs and as I say, I would like to have a new home and new furnishings, but what am I going to do with grandchildren like that? How can I get across to my sons that I don't want my

What Makes You Think You Can't Be Beautiful? Don't Believe It!

By Ida Jean Kain

THINK on this . . . A leading scientist has said that the more convinced you are that you cannot be beautiful, the less likely it is that you ever will be; for then you will lack poise and self-confidence and fail to take advantage of what nature gave you.

What makes you think you can't be beautiful? Is it the idea that there is only one standard of beauty? Perhaps you admire the Katharine Hepburn type of dashing looks . . . but what if Katie had brooded because she did not look like Betty Grable? That would have undermined her confidence and taken away the verve you admire. Or maybe you prefer June Allyson's fresh kind of beauty . . . but what if June had felt cheated because she didn't look like Hedy Lamarr? In that case, June would not have developed her own special beauty.

And that's the way it is with all of us. There are very few "born beauties." Anyone who will go ahead and make the best of nature's gifts, can create the atmosphere of beauty . . . and that's all that's needed!

Lack of Confidence Hampers Charm

I TRULY believe that too many girls and women are frustrated by what they regard as lack of beauty in themselves, judged by arbitrary standards. It is this lack of confidence that keeps them from growing into lovely-looking women.

Making yourself over is by no means limited to figure-fixing . . . although getting nearer to normal weight can do wonders for your mental outlook, and it's a change in thinking that's most important. The secret is not to waste time dwelling on what you lack—that keeps you from developing what you have. Stretch your imagination and you'll see that nature didn't short-change you. Think what you can do by making the most of your good points and completely forgetting what can't be changed.

Shakespeare Had a Word on Subject

AND take this sage bit of advice from Shakespeare, "If you lack a virture, assume it." Go ahead and do it! Stand up proudly and you have more confidence, and with confidence you move gracefully . . . and start feeling like an attractive, vital person. Then you begin to look it. It really works that way, and it even applies to that mysterious aura of beauty that some women possess and others appear to lack. Your predominant thought about yourself is what the world accepts.

The way to be nicer looking is to first of all change your thinking. The formula is the same: Desire, belief, creative imagination, and determination to change wishing into "willing" and action. The magic is in you . . . in your will-to-do.

Little Box Coat Has Universal Appeal

Although the short short-coat that is so flared that it looks almost like a cape is the newest fashion, I think the little box short coat will be very popular, too, because it is so easily worn by every woman, no matter what her age is or what kind of a figure she has.

The spring 1950 box short coats look quite different from any you may have had before. There are new soft shoulders, often drop shoulders, new wide sleeves that look almost Chinese, or melon sleeves, smart little vents at the sides, and an enormous variety of small collars.

The fabrics are bulky in type but not too heavy—monotone tweeds, spring weight chinchillas, suedes, of course, gabardines, too.

Netherlands Embassy Dinner Honors Stikkers

THE NETHERLANDS AMBASSADOR and Mme. van Kleffens gave a dinner last evening for their house guests, the Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, Dirk Stikker, and Mme. Stikker. Guests numbered 22. A dinner this evening for the Foreign Minister and his wife will be given by Eugene Black, President of the World Bank, and Mrs. Black, at the 1925 F Street Club.

After a visit of four days at the embassy, the Foreign Minister and Mme. Stikker are leaving tomorrow for New York where they will visit until Tuesday and then fly back to Holland.

Vladimir Visson Cocktail Party Host

VLADIMIR VISSON came down from New York yesterday to give a cocktail party at the home of his brother, Andre Visson, on the eve of the opening of the International Hallmark Art Award Exhibition at Corcoran Gallery of Art. As director of the Hallmark Art Award, Vladimir Visson entertained from 5 to 7 for art-minded Washington. He will attend the opening this evening at the Corcoran Gallery.

Three Washingtonians, Robert S. Gates, Edmund R. Demers and Samuel Bookatz, who are Hallmark prize winners, attended Mr. Visson's cocktail party.

Before the opening at the Corcoran this evening, Mr. and Mrs. Andre Visson will give a dinner at their home for members of the Corcoran Art Gallery and organizers of the exhibit.

Mrs. Barkley Feted By Mrs. Simkowitz

MRS. ALBEN BARKLEY, wife of the Vice President, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Simkowitz entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Mayflower Lounge.

Others in the group were Mrs. John W. Clubs Make Flower Show Plans

Plans for the garden club section at the twenty-sixth National Flower and Garden Show March 23 are nearing completion.

Fifty-six classes of entries are scheduled for the garden club section, which will occupy one-sixth of the floor space at the Armory. These classes comprise gardens, period rooms featuring flower decor, table settings and niches forming a picture-frame background for flower arrangements. The Sesquicentennial theme will keynote the garden club section exhibits, most displays being presented in the manner of the year 1800 and again in the mode of 1950.

Anyone can enter as an exhibitor in the garden club section. Applications for entries will be received by Mrs. E. E. Brown, 1362 Hamilton st. nw.

things broken, that they are all precious to me? Some of them cannot be replaced with new things. Please answer soon. E. P.

Set Pace of Respect for Valued Property

DEAR E. P.: What were you doing while the little darlings were playing havoc with your arrangements and breaking valued keepsakes, under the nose of their doting parents who seemed to think their performance was cute? You were trying to keep from exploding, I gather, while also professing "not to mind."

But why should you smile while your treasured possessions are being mauled? Why should you let the grandchildren treat your parlor as a game room and use your best bric-a-brac as toys? After all, this is your property and if you don't protect it and signify respect for it, how can others know what it means to you?

From your personal experience in raising children, surely you know it's not "in reason" to expect small children to keep their hands off maneuverable articles, unless they are instructed to do so, firmly and repeatedly—and immediately blocked and suitably chastised if they over-reach, to indicate that "don't touch" orders must be obeyed.

Don't Be Afraid to Uphold Rights

TO MAKE THINGS easier on the property guardian in such case, it is sensible (1) to put out of reach as much perishable goods as possible, when an invasion of small guests is expected; and (2) to provide some material for their entertainment, to occupy their minds and hands, and thus divert their attention from their surroundings and also from the adults present. Building blocks, take-apart toys, wooden puzzles, picture books, peg boards, etc., brought out in rotation, or divided around, would serve the purpose—and take the sting out of a firm policy of "don't touch" other things.

A play space should be decreed, say in the middle of the parlor floor, or in a corner with breakable furnishings moved aside, and climbing or tumbling on chairs or sofas should be stopped at once. And if your sons (or their respective helpmeets) thoughtlessly presume that grandparental devotion ought to indulge grandchildren's playful destructiveness as innocent fun, or as great entertainment to watch, then it's your duty to teach them differently—not by throwing fits, having hysterics, blowing your top and reading the riot act, but by going into action systematically and without apolgy, to run the show when you are the hostess.

If you take executive charge of the situation in this fashion, the young marrieds may find it less fun than before to drop in with the small fry, to give themselves a rest and the youngsters a field day at your expense—as they have been doing. But if they come less often, or look hurt at your positive policy, don't you fret. The younger generation always has a higher regard for parents who know their rights and uphold them, than they do for easy marks who seem to live in fear of losing favor. M. H.

Library Accepts League Records

By Gene Jones—The Washington Post

MISS ANNA LORD STRAUSS (right), president of the League of Women Voters, signs a transfer of league records to the Library of Congress. The Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans (left) accepted the gift for the library. Center is Mrs. Harold A. Stone, first vice president of the league.

The League of Women Voters formally transferred a collection of noncurrent files to the Library of Congress Wednesday. Dating back to 1920, the records contain source material illuminating the social and political history of the last three decades.

The thousands of papers, weighing more than 2 tons, are now being arranged for the Manuscripts division of the library by Dr. Louise M. Young, a special representative of the league.

The files of the league mirror the revolution in the status of women and children and they record the transformation of the suffrage battle into an organized movement to train citizens in active participation in public life. They show the effort to establish adequate maternal and infant care, to abolish child labor and obtain minimum wage and hour laws.

French Give Novel Touch To Common Ingredients

By Toni Clair

FRENCH hostesses use the common ingredients, but in unusual ways. These are ideas for you who like something a little "different"—and perhaps for your feminine friends. Serve sweetbreads and duck in colorful pottery, desserts on china, dainty or modern in feeling.

Sweetbreads Au Gratin

3 pairs sweetbreads
½ pound boiled ham, cubed
½ pound mushrooms, parboiled
1 tablespoon shortening
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup bouillon
1/3 cup cider
2 egg yolks
1/3 cup grated cheese
1 tablespoon butter

Parboil sweetbreads 15 minutes in boiling salted water; drain and split in halves crosswise. Place in greased baking dish and surround with ham and mushrooms. Melt shortening and blend in flour; add bouillon and cider and mix well. Cool and add egg yolks. Pour sauce over sweetbreads, sprinkle with cheese, dot with butter and bake 10 minutes in hot oven (450 degrees F.). Yield: 6 portions.

Stewed Duck en Casserole

1 4 to 5-pound duck
2 pounds mixed fresh vegetables (peas, green beans, mushrooms, carrots, turnips, potatoes, tomatoes)
1 tablespoon sweet marjoram, chopped
1/4 pound sliced bacon, diced

Prepare duck as for roasting. Sprinkle with salt and place in baking dish and add hot water to half cover duck. Boil, covered, over low heat 35 minutes. Clean and cube mushrooms, carrots, turnips and potatoes and add to stew with bacon and marjoram. Cook 1 hour, or until meat is tender. Twenty minutes before duck is done, add peas, beans and tomatoes and continue cooking. Yield: 6 portions.

French Pastry Meringue

Heat 16 marshmallows and 1 tablespoon milk in top part of double boiler, stirring until marshmallows are half melted. Remove from heat and continue folding until a smooth fluffy mass is obtained. Cool. Beat two egg whites until stiff but not dry, adding 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar and 1/4 teaspoon salt. Add 1/4 cup sugar gradually, beating until mixture stands in stiff peaks. Tint to the desired shade with vegetable coloring. Fold marshmallows lightly into meringue. Split ladyfingers in half; with a spoon or pastry gun, cover ladyfingers. Place under broiler ½ minute to delicately brown. Yield: two dozen meringue pastries.

French Sauterne Cream

2 cups sugar
1 cup Sauterne
2 tablespoons lemon juice
6 tablespoons orange juice
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 tablespoon grated lemon rind
1/3 cup potato flour
1/3 cup water

Combine eggs, sugar, wine, lemon and orange juice and lemon and orange rind and beat over hot water until mixture is foamy. Make a paste of potato flour and water, add to mixture and beat until cream starts to boil. Turn into serving dish and chill in refrigerator Approximate yield: eight portions.

Cinderella...

Beginning Sunday in The Washington Post

You've heard of Walt Disney's new technicolor movie, "Cinderella" . . . his greatest since "Snow White."

Now, for readers of The Washington Post, Walt Disney presents this lovely story in comic strip form. You'll be able to follow Cinderella's story in the Sunday Post color comics!

It's the fine old story of Cinderella, but with that delightful, extra touch that only Walt Disney can provide. Whether you see the movie or not, you'll want to get the story of Cinderella for your family every Sunday.

It's wonderful for children and they won't want to miss a single espisode. Read it yourself. See what the magic touch of Walt Disney can add to this beautiful old fairy tale.

PETUNIA!

When life's become monotorous
And growing daily duller,
You can make a lot of difference
With a little bit of color!

Yes, indeed, Petunia! Glass-curtained windows gain personality when you add a bright valance . . . and you can make an attractive skirt for a lampshade to match.

Your Baby

Right Word Helps Child Learn Speech

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Mrs. J. writes, "Your column is widely discussed in our family and we derive much enjoyment from it. Lately a topic of real interest has been our son's acquisition of a vocabulary. He is 20 months old and has mastered 239 words. He speaks most distinctly with the exception of words containing double ffs and double consonants such as tr or st. Do you have any valuable suggestions on this subject of vocabulary development?"

"When can we expect him to speak in sentences? He does use two or three words in this fashion 'Johnny, toys, play.' I am trying to teach him two languages. What is the best way to go about doing this?"

He is unusually precocious now to have so many words in his vocabulary. In a few months he should be speaking fluently in sentences though he may not use as many verbs as nouns and may confuse his pronouns.

Unless you use both languages in the home regularly it would be unnecessarily confusing to the child to be taught two words for every object. I would concentrate on the language you use most and let him become proficient in that. If you speak another tongue then, being curious and intelligent, he will probably want to know what you are saying and explaining to him should make him familiar with those words and phrases, too. But, it shouldn't be a lesson in the sense that you said, "I am trying to teach him." Let him learn the auxiliary language by hearing it spoken.

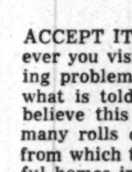
You'll find pleasure in making your selection in the gay trimly decorated shop. Visit Alexandria Floor Covering this week-end. KI. 8-6667.

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE? . . . that's the most often asked question when weight is to be lost. The STAUFFER SYSTEM quite frankly says it depends on the individual! And that stands to reason, don't you think? The longer you have carried excessive weight and the longer you put off doing something about it such as continuing a "starchy" diet, etc., the longer it will take to redistribute poundage! The Stauffer System is a wonderful method to use, you'll feel rewarded with the results. Shirlington Shopping Center. KI. 8-6872.



CHINESE PORCELAIN 'FINDS'! . . . the exquisite Chinese porcelain hat stands we found this week at the Carlyle Antique Shop are indeed lovely and perfect for conversion into matched lamps! If You Can't Pry That Shabby Chair Away From Friend Husband, Maybe You'd Better Give It a Face-Lifting

AN old leather chair that's too stained and shabby for beauty but too good to toss out can create a problem—but not an insoluble one.

"We have a leather lounge chair that was given my husband by his father some years ago," writes T. K. G. "He loves that old chair dearly, but it's a sight. The green leather is stained, ugly, and slightly scuffed in places, but otherwise intact. Is there any way I could paint or dye it to restore its looks?"

There's a plastic paint on the market, T. K. G., that can be used on leather and leatherette to give it a new surface.

Or, if you feel the chair is worth spending a little more money on, you can have it redyed by at least one local firm. Telephone Executive 0961. This company takes the old dye off and puts new on. (They can even turn black chairs white!) They fill in cracks and completely refinish the leather. The cost runs $18 to $20 for a lounge chair.

SEEMS our furrier friend was wrong when he advised us that pelts are hard for amateur trappers to dispose of in small quantities. A covey of letters from readers contradicts that view. Here are a few samples, to spur hunters and trappers roundabouts. Thanks a lot, readers.

DEAR ANNE:

In reference to Mrs. Stevens' letter the other day asking about sale of muskrat and mink pelts: A reputable concern I know of that will buy pelts in quantities from one pelt on up is: F. C. Taylor Fur Co., St. Louis, Mo.

Furs are also bought by Sears, Roebuck & Co., Philadelphia, Pa. They will also send a booklet on how to prepare the skins before sending them in.

Dozens of other fur-buying companies, most of them reliable, have ads appearing in the fur and outdoor magazines which can be found at any large magazine dealers.

L. F. S.

DEAR ANNE:

My brother, up to the time of his death several years ago, sent all furs and pelts from the farm to Weil Brothers, Fort Wayne, Ind. They issued a price catalog and paid much higher prices than any local buyer. The company is probably still in existence. A postcard would be all that is needed to find out.

ROBINA HASKELL
4720 Suitland rd., D. C.

DEAR ANNE:

I do not know what part of the country Mrs. B. R. Stevens lives in, but Piedmont Produce Co., 309 Main st., Culpeper, Va., buys furs in small lots. Frequently country stores do it, too. You once gave me some information for which I was grateful, so I am glad to pass this on.

MRS. R. SOMERVILLE
Mitchells, Va.

"DON'T CRY over spilled milk" is easy to say, since the mop-up takes only a jiffy. But spilled coal oil? That's likely to be a sad, sad story, as one letter from a reader reveals.

"DEAR ANNE,

We had our coal oil barrels sitting close to our well after having them filled. One barrel leaked out about 10 or 12 gallons on the ground. Since then, our water has been tasting from the oil after every rain. Is there any chemical that can be put on the ground to destroy the taste of the oil?

MRS. S. L. ST. CLAIR.

Alas, it appears that spilled coal oil can't be eliminated that easily, for when oil of any kind seeps into the ground it coats each particle of sand and soil. This coating will be washed away only after a great many rains—how many, no one can say exactly.

Any action to eliminate the coal oil taste from your well water would depend on several factors: the type of well construction, the depth and movement of ground water and the characteristics of the surrounding soil. It may be possible for you to get results by sinking your well screen deeper, or by reinforcing the well casing. However, you would need professional advice based on your particular well situation. The Public Health Department in your county should be able to give you more definite counsel.

Anne answers questions through her column only. We regret that time does not permit direct mail or telephone replies. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

The District Line

... by Bill Gold

Between Hugh and Me, He Got in His Commercial

I got a visit yesterday from my old friend Hugh Guidi of WTOP (to whom a listener once sent a letter addressed to "Huke Weedy").

If Hugh isn't the best salesman on the air today, he's certainly one of the best. I don't dare listen to him read commercials, or I'd be permanently in debt.

"What's on your mind, Hugh?" I asked, meantime wishing I had hidden my money in my shoe.

"A deal," said Hugh. "A trade. I'm going to trade you a funny story for a little mention in your column of the minstrel show we're putting on."

I shook my head, but never got a chance to say "no," because Hugh kept right on going.

"I know you've discontinued running plugs, and I'm supposed to send it to the city editor, but this is different. It's something for the column. A funny story. And goodness knows you need one.

"But if you don't want to mention the Edward Douglas White Council of the Knights of Columbus, or the minstrel show it is putting on tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30, at the Washington-Lee High School in Arlington, that's okay with me. I'll give you the story anyhow."

And here it is:

Ike and Mike had been great friends in life, and when they were separated by death, Ike went to Heaven and Mike went to that other place. One day Ike called Mike on the phone and asked how things were going.

"Oh, pretty good," said Mike. "All we have to do is shovel a little coal on the fires every so often; and when there's a coal shortage, we don't even have to do that. How's it with you?"

"Terrible," groaned Ike. "I'm kept busy all day long, setting out the stars at night, taking them in again in the morning, shining up the moon, sweeping away clouds, and stuff like that. I'm on the go all the time."

"Goodness," sympathized Mike. "How come they expect one fellow to do all that work in Heaven?"

"You may not believe this," sighed Ike, "but up here we're kind of short-handed."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Healthy 8-month-old part-setter female, needs room to run; loves children." (Hobart 5023.)

"Two 6-month-old male kittens; gentle, affectionate, good mousers. They form a brother act, and should be kept together if possible." (Hudson 9456.)

OVERHEARD

"I told her she was going to cost me money, but she wouldn't listen to me. She made $40 too much last year, and now it's going to cost me more than a hundred in extra taxes."

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. Dale Upham, 810 10th st., Alexandria, Va.: Thanks for the kind words.

HOT STOVE LEAGUE

A mighty proud young man these days is 13-year-old Jack Gilbert of 6119 7th pl. nw.

A great baseball enthusiast, Jack made out his pennant predictions for the American and National League races this season—and the next day Grantland Rice came out with exactly the same predictions.

This is indeed quite an accomplishment for a 13-year-old, and it would appear that Jack is now ready to test his forecasting ability against two of the Nation's least renowned baseball experts.

On the day before the Nats open their season each year I publish my own predictions, plus those of Jim Wessel of the Associated Press.

If Jack would like to join the fun, all he has to do is submit his list for publication.

But I'll warn him in advance—a guy feels pretty foolish along about August, when his first-place selection is wallowing around in the second division.

COMPLAINT DEPT.

Here's a beef from a chap who works the swing shift at one of our afternoon contemporaries. I guess I'd better let him remain anonymous so that his bosses won't think he's disloyal by giving us his complaint business. He says:

"The Arnold bus line which serves my area of Falls Church runs only during the rush hours. So I have to walk a long distance along the highway in the dead of night to reach my home.

"One of the Arnold drivers, who passes my house on the way to the barn, let me stay aboard until I reached my destination.

"I thought he was a credit to the line—but now I find he's in trouble with the inspector because of the favor he did me. I think that's a pretty punk way to run a bus line."

FLASH!

Stop the presses.

Bruce Bennett of 312 Cumberland ave., Chevy Chase, Md., reports:

"While serving my paper route on Dorset ave. in Somerset, Md., yesterday, I saw what I believe is this year's First Robin."

NO WONDER

Judy Susan Edelstein of 105 36th st. ne., a 7-B student at Eliot Junior High, weighs in with the observation:

"John L. Lewis doesn't care whether we get coal or not. He's got his eyebrows to keep him warm."

PUN FUN

Andy F. Kisacky of 4806 Suitland rd. se. wisecracks:

"That Oklahoma leopard is no longer disturbing the peace, but can we say as much for the District Lion?"

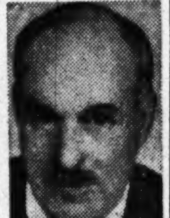
The 'Washington Merely-Go-Wrong'

Phew Drearson Sees the Light

By Drew Pearson

The Circus Saints and Sinners in New York took good old Gen. Harry Vaughan over the hurdles the other day and also included a few sideswipes at yours truly. In fact, they wrote a column, "Washington Merely-Go-Wrong, by Phew Drearson." And in the spirit of good clean fun, I reproduce "Phew Drearson's column forthwith and herewith below:



Pearson

"It will be denied, but I have it on the best authority that there is a serious split in the White House family between President Truman and his military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry S. Vaughan. The cause of this cleavage is your correspondent, whose offer to apologize to General Vaughan rocked official Washington yesterday.

"From sources that I have hitherto found to be absolutely reliable, I have learned that I offered to withdraw all I have said or written against General Vaughan if President Truman will withdraw all he has written or said, especially said, about me.

"Last night a closed meeting was held at Blair House. Present were Truman, Vaughan, and others of the Missouri crowd. The President who, at the time, was holding three aces and a joker (George Allen), insisted upon standing pat. Vaughan, according to my informant, tried to get the President to accept my apology, but the meeting broke up at midnight with the general apparently losing the decision and $42.60.

Secret Meetings

"It can now be disclosed that I have held several clandestine meetings with General Vaughan, and that he has been largely successful in convincing me that no personal animosity was reflected in the President's apparent designation of me as an S.O.B. Vaughan, who is very familiar with the folklore of his native State, tells me that in Missouri the initials S.O.B. are generally accepted as meaning "sweet old bungler," as applied to one who with good intentions in his heart, inadvertently does or says the wrong thing.

"While I am entirely willing to accept this interpretation, I felt that I was still justified in demanding an apology from the President, in view of the fact that these initials are, in more enlightened sections of the country, associated with words that have an entirely different connotation, reflecting upon the birth or ancestry of the designee.

"Right here I want to say that I was not in the least disturbed when the President nominated me as an S.O.B. What did hurt me deeply was that the Senate was ready to unanimously confirm the appointment.

Guileless and Guiltless

"I have never been sparing of criticism of people in public life, but I must admit, in all honesty, that I made a serious error of judgment in my campaign against the General, and I Vaughan to take it all back as soon as the President removes the stigma he has stamped upon me. General Vaughan is really a man of rare personal charm who gives freely—often too freely—of his friendship. Naturally there are those who take advantage of him for their own purposes. I have done some checking back and, when I receive Truman's apology, I intend to say that I have found the General blameless in every charge made against him thus far.

"Take that matter of the medal from Argentina. I accused Vaughan of shortsightedness, medalmania and excessive vanity. I now find that he fully appreciates Argentina's emnity toward the U.S.A. and that in accepting the decoration he was only trying to cut down on their stockpile of strategic metal.

"His activities in the Tanforan racetrack and the molasses deals were solely to stimulate business that was being stifled by bureaucratic red tape. His friendship for John Maragon was noble and inspiring, and we all ought to bear in mind that Maragon has never been pointed out as a pro-Communist."
